TIME TO RATIFY THE STUFF CONSTITUTION

THIS JULY FOURTH, DECLARE INDEPENDENCE FROM YOUR PANTS.

We, the people of stuffmagazine.com, in order to form a more perfect barbecue, establish pool parties, ensure even tanning, promote the benevolence of the Coors Party Ball and fight for our right to party, do ordain and establish this Constitution of the United States of Stufferica.

STUFF OUTTAKES!

We submit for your entertainment photos of the hottest girls in the union. Check back each day! They're hotter than all the Daughters of the American Revolution combined. We promise!

TRUE LIES!

Hear ye, hear ye, we hereby call to order July's True Lies theme. Spin us your most farcical yarn involving a fireworks calamity and you will be entered to win a bounty of prizes. (Sorry, we're all out of the stylish new powdered wigs—you'll have to make do with a video game or DVD!)

SAVE THE ROCK STAR!

JIMMY JELLINEK
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

This issue is dedicated to that bloated, endangered species, the rock star. Due to rehab, bankruptcy and shifting musical tastes, what was once as prevalent as the great American buffalo is now struggling merely to survive. Hotels have gone quiet, pools are free of furniture and not a single television has been hurled off a balcony in several years. Paternity suits and DNA tests have also fallen off dramatically. Somehow, at some point, the rock stars we once looked up to as gods started behaving like your parents. Well, we've had enough. Won't somebody please break something for the sake of the future? Think of the children. Imagine a world where everybody is stage-managed like puppets, where "Hello, Cleveland" means simply "Hello, Cleveland" and not "Lock up your daughters!" Well, we don't want to imagine it, dammit. We at Stuff say bring back the rock!

Thankfully, we've got you covered. Inside, you can find our detailed guide to tapping your inner rock star. In our exclusive guide, you'll learn from the best: Poison, Mötley Crüe, Alice Cooper, Journey… If it's been done, they did it, and they want to show you how to do it again. Oh, man, is this gonna be good.

SWAP SHOP!

BRING US YOUR TIRED, YOUR POOR, YOUR HUDDLED MASSES OF CRAP.

DO SOMETHING CRAZY Stuff Live! IT'S YOUR MAGAZINE

Ask, and ye shall receive: That's the Swap Shop credo. In layman's terms, we want to replace your worthless, broken junk with something immaculate, shiny and new. Send us a quality picture of whatever it might be (or the item itself), and we'll do our damnedest to upgrade it to something that'll rock you. See the top of the next page for the gory entry details.

TRADE UP! JOCK JAM WORTH $130

Hey, Stuff,
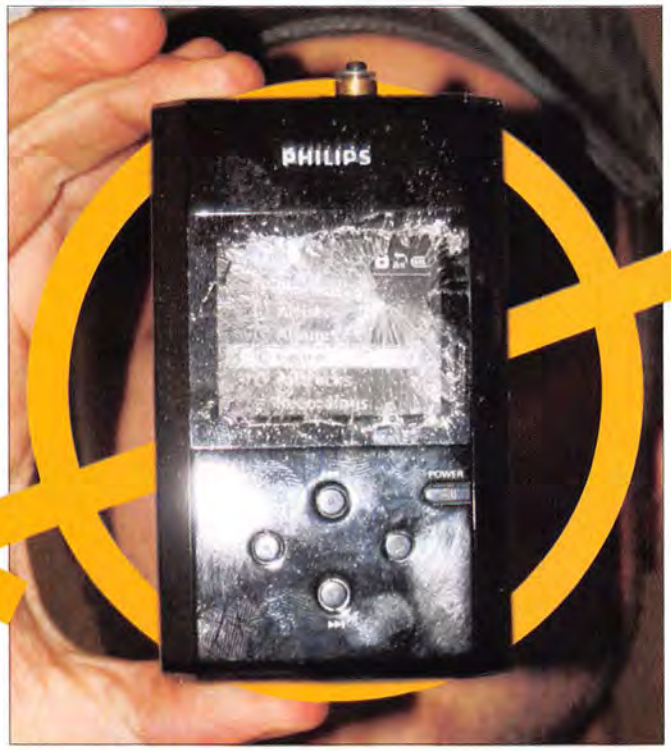
So I'm trying to get back into shape. This MP3 player was helping me stay motivated, but the other day some dickhead flew by me on a mountain bike and knocked it out of my hand. Give me a new one or I'll get fat again!
Zach Jones
Reno, Nevada

YOU WIN!
We can't exercise without music either, and that's why we're giving you this sweet new Samsung YP-T5H MP3 player. With simulated surround sound, it will keep your tunes (and chubby legs) pumping.



TRADE UP! COMP CRASH WORTH $900

Yo, Stuff,
I was on my balcony with this antiquated Toshiba laptop when all of a sudden my sister's kid ran outside and slammed into me. The computer slid off the table like a hockey puck, and the pavement landing wasn't too graceful. Can you help?
Bruce Hale
Breinigsville, Pennsylvania

YOU WIN!
Don't let that little hellion anywhere near the brand-new Toshiba Satellite A105 15.4-inch-diagonal widescreen laptop we're giving you. This thing is worth more than his life. On second thought, maybe we'll just keep it for ourselves...what's that, Stuff lawyers? Very well, then. Enjoy, pal.

TRADE UP! SHAFT SHANK WORTH $300

Hey, Stuff,
My driver decided to decapitate itself the other day at the range. It totally blew—the head ended up about 20 yards further than the ball. Can you see what you can do about replacing it with something that makes me not suck so much? I need an upgrade bad.
Kyle Newman
Goshen, Indiana

YOU WIN!
This new Wilson Staff Dd6 Driver is sure to improve your game. With its massive 460-cc head and focused sweet spot, you'll finally be able to outdrive that gorilla in your foursome. It can blast some horrendous divots, too.

SEND OR E-MAIL US A SNAPSHOT OF YOU WITH YOUR JUNK!

Did you accidentally ruin your favorite gadget, accessory or item of clothing? Don't fret. Send us a quality photo along with your pathetic sob story, and if it tugs on our heartstrings, we might just give you an upgrade. E-mail your entries and photos to letters@stuffmagazine.com, or send the items themselves to Help Me, Stuff, 1040 Avenue of the Americas, New York, NY, 10018. For rules, go to stuffmagazine.com.

TRADE UP! CLICKER CRACK WORTH $250

What's up, Stuff,
A week or so ago, I was trying to fire up a high-quality art flick in my DVD player, and the remote wouldn't work. I was unable to contain my rage, so in one quick Bo Jackson–like movement, I snapped it in half. Can you send me another?
Damon C. Hollins
University City, Missouri

YOU WIN!
This Logitech Harmony 880 universal remote should do the trick. We don't want to know what kind of damage you did to yourself once you got the "art flick" playing, so please don't write back.

TRADE UP! DIGI DAMAGE WORTH $450

Stuff,
After installing a new exhaust system on my motorcycle, I decided to take some pictures for my Web site. Then I went for a joyride, but I forgot that it was on the back seat. It tumbled off at 25 mph. I think a new one is in order.
Aaron Christopher
Youngstown, Ohio

YOU WIN!
That sucks. Thankfully, we just happen to have a new Nikon Coolpix S6 camera, which we'll gladly pass along. It's the least we can do—that thing you've been using is the Model T of digital cameras. This thing—with its giant three-inch LCD screen—is the future.

TRADE UP! LENS BEND WORTH $145

Dear Stuff guys,
This pair of Oakley T Wires were a gift from my girlfriend. I forgot that they were on top of my hat during a game of tennis, and when they fell off during a particularly spirited rally, I accidentally stepped on them. Replace them so I don't have to tell her what happened!
Spencer Dean
Morton, Pennsylvania

YOU WIN!
Here ya go, pal—a brand-new pair of Oakley Crosshair S glasses with patented High Definition Optics. Next time you find yourself in a "particularly spirited" game of tennis, just toss a pastel sweater around your neck and chill out.

NO WAY! EAR ACHE WORTH $0

Stuff bros,
The other day I was rollerblading through the park, zoning out with my wireless headphones, when I suddenly hit a stick. Before I knew what was happening, I was on my face and my 'phones were in pieces around my slightly concussed head. Everybody laughed at me.
Thomas Sigler
State College, Pennsylvania

YOU LOSE!
Rollerblading, eh? Did you ruin your fanny pack, too? Any stains on your spandex? You should have at least lied and said you were skateboarding or biking or doing something respectable. Then we would have hooked you up with these HQ-1300 headphones from Creative. Ouch and double ouch.

The Hit List

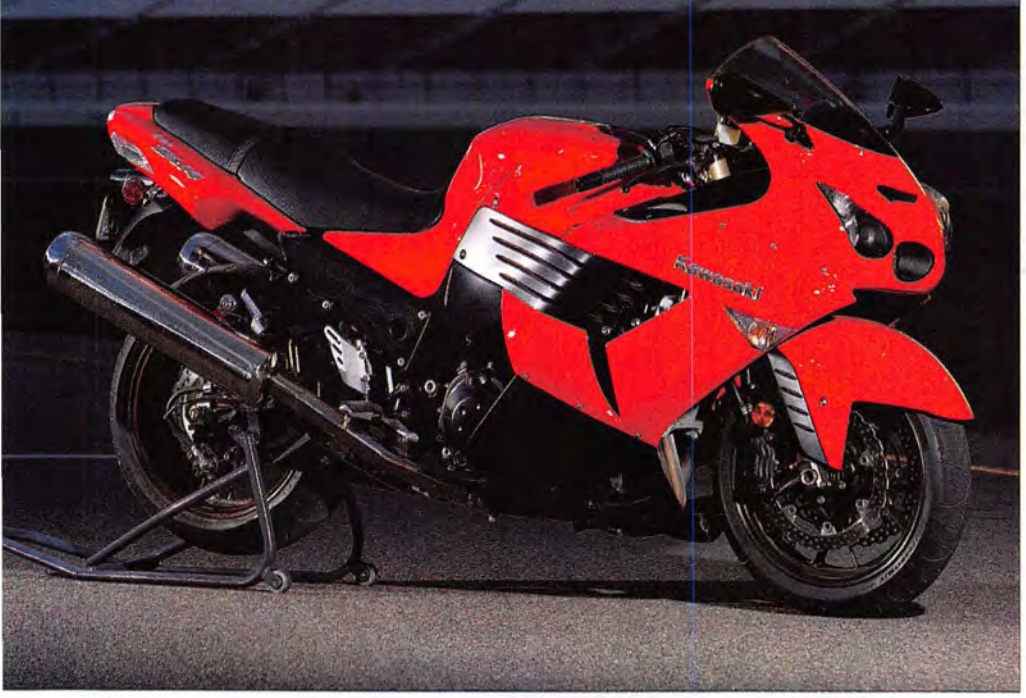
Everything you need to know

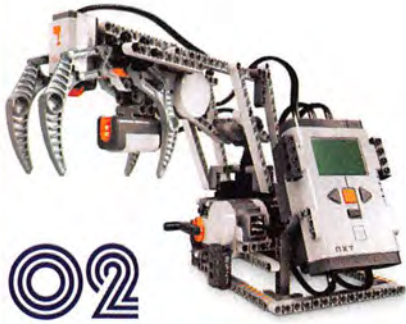
01

Full Throttle

Kawasaki Ninja ZX-14 assaults the streets.

Feel like driving frighteningly fast? Then plant your ass on Kawasaki's latest two-wheeled monster: the Ninja ZX-14, otherwise known as Kawasaki's most powerful street bike ever ($11,499). The 1352-cc engine delivers unreal acceleration while the sleek aluminum monocoque frame makes for an aerodynamic, ultrabalanced ride. So no need to attach any My Little Pony training wheels—just be sure to have a helmet on your head and some rosary beads in your fist when you start it up. kawasaki.com





02

Robot Uprising, Aisle 4

Piss off, Johnny Five. Lego's new Mindstorms NXT robot ($250) features a microprocessor and sensors that allow it to react to sounds, movement and touch. Once enabled, the robot, say its makers, "takes on a life of its own." Creepy. And, to be fair, slightly dorky. mindstorms.lego.com

03

Flowcabulary

Trill, adj.

Pronunciation: TRILL
Definition: Derived from hip-hop slang to describe someone who is well-respected; rooted in a combination of the words true and real.
Origin: Port Arthur, Texas, rapper Bun B is the proudest purveyor of the word.
Used in a sentence: "I have to say I respect R. Kelly. He loves girls and pulls no punches. He keeps it trill."

THE STUFF LINE Winnings based on a $100 wager at betonsports.com.

Which, if any, of the following celebrities will open a restaurant this year and name it after themselves?

Bruce Willis $2,000 | Jake Gyllenhaal $2,500 | Calista Flockhart $5,000 | Jessica Alba $2,000 | Jason Mewes $2,000

BE KRISTIN'S STUDY BUDDY! SHE GOES TO LOYOLA MARYMOUNT UNIVERSITY IN L.A.!

04

Wave Rider

Laguna Beach's Kristin Cavallari.

At the superhot yet superillegal age of 17, this It Girl made a huge splash on MTV's Laguna Beach: The Real Orange County in 2004. She's since grown up a bit and made the leap from the TV set to the gossip pages. Rumor has it, Nick Lachey's penchant for blond-haired, brown-eyed babes took him out of Jessica's arms and plopped him into Kristin's lap. While you wait for your chance with the sexy little rich girl, get an eyeful of her on the first season of Laguna Beach on DVD, in stores now.

What Lies Beneath

Eishia Brightwell heats up.

Would you let your girlfriend wear your $1 million watch? You would if she were model Eishia Brightwell. Not even then-boyfriend Usher could resist letting the gorgeous Eishia wear his costly bling for the night. Eishia has left a trail of broken hearts in her wake, including hip-hop badass Xzibit, so think twice before approaching the six-foot-one beauty at a bar. She used to play ball for UNLV's women's team, so you'd better bring your A game, or you could catch an elbow in the paint.

07 Spaceport Singapore

Book now—space tourism is taking off.

Vacations in outer space are as inevitable as a herpes cold sore on Colin Farrell's lip, so Space Adventures Ltd. is on the case. The company recently announced plans to develop a spaceport in Singapore that'll feature astronaut training facilities and suborbital spaceflights for tourists. Buzz Aldrin, the second man on the moon, is on the advisory board for the training center, so you know it's legit. Plunk down your credit card and prepare to experience zero gravity while gazing into the blackness of space. We suggest having a light breakfast. spaceportsingapore.com

WHAT'S HOT

CLOSET CASE

DOES CLAY NEED A BEARD?

With rumors flying about Clay Aiken's sexuality, many of his fans are shouting that they've been hoodwinked by his wholesome image. Some are even threatening to bring a class-action suit against his record label! We think he might need to get into a "relationship of convenience" with a nice young lady to fix things. Imagine how cute he'd look with Amanda Bynes. Or what about Ashlee Simpson? He could be a good influence on one of those Olsen twins... Who knows? That chick with cerebral palsy from The Facts of Life just might be the gal for him!

All they need is Gandalf and they'll have the hottest orgy ever.

Q&A

BRO-FILE

KEVIN DILLON

The dude behind Johnny Drama fills us in on the upcoming season of Entourage.

STUFF: What's in store for our boy Johnny this season?
KEVIN: I don't know how much of this I'm supposed to talk about, but he kind of gets a job—a pretty decent one. Whether or not he hangs onto it, who knows. Johnny's been known to get a job or two and not be able to hang onto 'em.
It's been a while since he's had a steady gig.
Yeah, since Viking Quest, Pacific Blue and Melrose Place—it's so funny, the shows he's been on. I've got a line in an upcoming episode that he was on some show called Cornelius & Son.
Do you ever wonder what Viking Quest might have been about?
You know, I never really thought too deeply into it. I guess he has a quest to save the world, but he was a Viking. So I think it was like a time traveling–Thor kind of thing.
Are new cast members ever going to be added to the group?
There's some of that going on in the new season, where one of our hometown boys comes to town. He just gets out of the joint and shows up at the house. It's a nice little addition to the entourage.
Since Entourage is loosely based on executive producer Mark Wahlberg's life, does that mean there's a real Johnny Drama out there somewhere?
There is, yeah. He's Mark's cousin. He's similar to the character on the show, but he's not the same. The real Johnny Drama isn't mooching off Mark; he makes his own money and all that. But at one stage he was Mark's trainer, he got Mark into shape, he loves cooking...these are traits that I have on the show.
Have you ever been out with your brother Matt and had people recognize you and not him?
Recently Matt was telling me, "People have been coming up to me and asking me about you." Like, "Tell me about Johnny Drama." And it's always been kind of the reverse, happening to me.

MOVIE OF THE MONTH

SUPERMAN RETURNS

Brandon Routh, Kate Bosworth, Kevin Spacey Dir: Bryan Singer

WHAT IT IS In a sequel that picks up where the great Superman II ("Kneel before Zod!") left off, the last son of Krypton (Routh) returns from a yearlong outer-space sabbatical only to find that his main squeeze, Lois Lane (Bosworth), has a new boyfriend—and a new baby. Is there still a place in the world for Superman? Not if criminal genius Lex Luthor (Spacey) has his say.

WHY WE'RE WORRIED Hey, we're sure folks on Krypton were all enlightened and shit, but the red briefs that director Singer put Routh in to play the Man of Steel are just a wee bit too snug in the Superjunk area, don't you think?

WHY WE'RE PSYCHED Singer knows his spandex. His two kick-ass X-Men films helped launch the current superhero-movie craze and still haven't been topped. Plus, casting an unknown as Supes, a cutie as Lois and an Academy Award winner as Lex worked for the first Superman movie, didn't it?

When Superman Returns drops June 30, you will believe a $180 million blockbuster can fly!

BEHIND THE SCREEN

WASSUP ROCKERS

Director Larry Clark spills on his L.A. skate-punk flick.

"We rented a house in Compton, which was a great place to film. We were in a gangbanger neighborhood, but they were very accommodating to us, and I really enjoyed working there. I didn't really get into much trouble—the kids watched my back. There were some gangbangers who asked who I was, and the kids told them I was making a film and I was OK; they were making sure I wasn't an undercover cop. People ask, 'How can you go out and be friends with these young kids and have them trust you?' I have a calling card; they've seen Bully and Kids, so they can understand what I'm trying to do."

NEW RELEASES

THE FAST AND THE FURIOUS: TOKYO DRIFT

LUCAS BLACK, BOW WOW

Dir: Justin Lin

After being sent to live with his hard-ass military dad in Tokyo, Sean Boswell (Black) takes to the streets when a cohort named Twinkie (Bow Wow) introduces him to the world of Japanese "drift racing."

June 16

CLICK

ADAM SANDLER, KATE BECKINSALE, CHRISTOPHER WALKEN, DAVID HASSELHOFF

Dir: Frank Coraci

When a workaholic (Sandler) gets a remote control with magical powers, he is able to take hold of both his career and personal life. But when the remote starts overruling his choices, the shit really hits the fan.

June 23

LITTLE MAN

SHAWN WAYANS, MARLON WAYANS, KERRY WASHINGTON

Dir: Keenen Ivory Wayans

Are you having Wayans-brother withdrawal? If so, buck up, soldier. This time, Shawn plays a guy who wants a kid so bad he mistakes a short, young-looking lawbreaker for his newly adopted son. Brilliant!

July 5

PIRATES OF THE CARIBBEAN: DEAD MAN'S CHEST

JOHNNY DEPP

GAME OF THE MONTH

TABLE TENNIS

Xbox 360 Rockstar Games

When Rockstar Games releases a new title, dudes everywhere speculate about what sick and twisted game play the creators of GTA and Manhunt will cook up. Their first sports title brings home the ferocious competition of—wait for it—pro table tennis! In surprisingly stellar fashion, Table Tennis' electric back-and-forth surpasses the tension of most fighting games and boasts some of the best Xbox 360 graphics ever. The key to ruling at Table Tennis is, ahem, spinning your balls: Learning to dish out wicked rotation during a serve will send that little bastard flying at unreturnable angles. This new masterpiece features hot paddling action, but its depravity-free battles are safe enough even for prude-in-chief Hillary Clinton.

Players can choose from 11 international competitors and rotate through 19 arenas!

PLAYLIST

TEKKEN: DARK RESUR-RECTION

PSP
Namco Bandai Games America

This version of Namco's premier kung-fu tournament delivers a first-class 3-D fighting game onto Sony's handheld with over 30 playable combatants. Two new characters—spoiled rich girl Lili and military man Dragunov—smash their way into the King of Iron Fist competition. And two-player WiFi support lets you do battle with a buddy, too.

X-MEN: THE OFFICIAL GAME

PS2, Xbox, Xbox 360, GC, PC, GBA, Nintendo DS
Activision

Need to find out how things went to hell for Marvel's merry mutants going into the third X-Men movie? Pick up X-Men: The Official Game and control one of three characters to see where their latest threat got its start. Nightcrawler darts out of the shadows, Wolverine throws down in bloody brawls and Iceman glides down sheets of ice like a giddy figure skater.

SPY HUNTER: NOWHERE TO RUN

PS2, Xbox
Midway

Tying into next summer's flick, Spy Hunter features Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson as a secret agent on a mission to stop terrorist organization NOSTRA from stealing cutting-edge military technology. For the first time in franchise history, the espionage action takes place on foot, so players can deliver the Rock's patented style of smackdown to any jabronis who step up.

ALBUM OF THE MONTH

TV ON THE RADIO

Return to Cookie Mountain Interscope

When the megabearded, superbespectacled Brooklyn rock outfit TV on the Radio dropped their first full-length album, Desperate Youth, Bloodthirsty Babes, in 2004, we were bummed at how weird and cold it sounded. TVOTR was touted as the flyest thing since the Wright brothers, so it's nice to see that they're finally living up to expectations on this major-label explosion. Their Alice Cooper–meets–*Q*Bert* crunch and sleep-to-dream sound works this time, because every song's chorus makes us want to scream at animals from the top of a mountain. Especially the horny, horn-filled "I Was a Lover" and the David Bowie–assisted "Province," a twinkly number about...well, it sounds cool!

David Bowie has been following TV on the Radio since Sitek sold Bowie's doorman one of his paintings in 2003.

Oh, the French. Daft Punk make brain-splitting robo-ironic techno pop; Air write spacey pipe-laying anthems. Phoenix are these bands' schizophrenic baby brother. Their new album is more rocking than ever, especially the ecstatic "Lost and Found."

Now that Busta's a bit longer in the tooth, he's begun to sound like a dungeon dragon. This isn't a bad thing; dragons are cool. On what seems like his 53rd album (his seventh, actually), Bussa-Bus keeps throwing down ass-shaking bangers.

LIQUID WISDOM WITH DAVE ATTELL

In between downing spirits, our drinking editor explains a thing or two about the Spirit of '76. Prepare to have your minds—and fingers—blown away.

THIS MONTH'S TOPIC: THE FOURTH OF JULY

Happy Fourth of July! The Fourth is one of my most favorite holidays. Unlike a lot of American celebrations, it has nothing to do with religion, love or secretaries. You don't have to wrap any gifts, buy flowers or call your mom. Just hang out, eat hot dogs, go to the beach and try not to be enslaved by an English person—unless it's Kate Beckinsale. Damn, she's hot! Did you see Underworld? She plays this vampire chick who runs around in spandex shooting werewolves. Lots of violence and heavy camel toe. Katie, you can bite me anytime. Sorry, back to the Fourth of July.

How did Independence Day get started? In the summer of 1776, the founding fathers gathered in Philadelphia to sign the Declaration of Independence. This hallowed document, written by Thomas Jefferson (see the twenty-dollar bill), guaranteed each citizen the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Upon reading it, all the people let out a big cheer—unless they were black, Native American or female. But the founding white dudes were happy, and a great party broke out, and the night sky was full of fireworks for the people to ooh-eth and aah-eth at.

I'm not kidding that they had fireworks back then. In fact, the second president, John Adams (no money, just stamps) remarked, "[The Fourth] ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade...bonfires and illuminations from one end of this continent to the other, from this day forward forevermore." Then his drunk cousin Sam Adams chased him around with a Roman candle.

Yes, fireworks have always been a part of the Fourth. Every year, in cities and towns across the country, they have elaborate fireworks shows set to patriotic music like "America, the Beautiful." So far, they're not often paired with hip-hop. I've yet to see a display set to "It's Hard Out Here for a Pimp." Although beautiful and symbolic, these shows are usually jam-packed with people, and I find myself thinking more about parking than freedom. And instead of looking up at the fireworks, my eyes are on the guy behind me yanking his doodle. Patriot or pervert? You decide.

I miss the days when you could set off your own stuff. Fireworks, like anything else that is fun is this country—smoking, drinking, abortions—are restricted and regulated. In some places you need a license or permit to carry fireworks. What's next—assault rifles? OK, I know what you're thinking: But, Dave, fireworks are dangerous, kids get hurt every year, blah blah blah. You're right. Kids do get hurt. Dumb kids. Every Fourth, there's a news story about some kid who stuffed an M-80 up his butt and blew his balls off. The reporter always calls it a tragedy. The only tragedy is that his buddies didn't videotape it. You throw something like that on the Internet and the guy's a superstar. Move over, fat Star Wars kid.

I think fireworks are a great learning tool. First off, in some states they're illegal, so kids can practice lying to their parents, which will help them later when they're buying booze and porn. And they're good exercise—you never run faster than when you're being chased by bottle rockets. And most important, there's a war on. We can't send kids into combat if the scariest thing they've ever done is light a sparkler. There is nothing lamer than a sparkler. A flashlight is more dangerous. I hate sparklers. When I hold one I feel like the Special Olympics torch boy.

That reminds me, I have a date. Gotta run. So, happy Fourth of July. Be free or die.

Now, if I can only figure out how to get these up the cat's heinie...

GETTING FIT WITH STACY KEIBLER

THIS MONTH'S EXERCISE: BICYCLE CRUNCHES

tuff*'s fitness editor and WWE Diva is on the hunt for your inner six-pack. So get on your backs and get to it!

GAME PLAN

"Having tight, washboard abs isn't just sexy; abdominal muscles help stabilize your torso, which helps give you good posture. And having strong stomach and back muscles is really crucial when it comes to preventing lower-back injuries. So grab some floor, guys, and do some crunches!"

"Lie on your back on a mat or on some cushiony carpet. Put your hands behind your head. Now raise your right leg and bend it at a 90-degree angle. Raise your left elbow and shoulder and, using your stomach muscles, come forward toward your knee. Concentrate on really squeezing your abs."

"Return to the first position and repeat on the same side for a full 20 reps. Be careful not to push the back of your head on the way up, or you could hurt your neck. Next, without resting, switch to the other side and do another 20. Try to get in three sets per workout with a minute or so rest in between. Have fun!"

FROM THE (BROKEN) HIP WITH FRED WILLARD

The comic genius from Best in Show and Anchorman: The Legend of Ron Burgundy gets serious about S-E-X.

They say the only two constants in life are death and taxes. Well, I think I can add a third: sex. Yes, even if we don't do it much, we can't help being bombarded by it and thinking about it. Now, opinions on sex are like penises. Every man has one and some can be quite shocking. If you ask me (and I say that in case someone does), certain news stories about the s word have me scratching my head and wanting to put in my two cents. So here we go...

When are middle-aged men going to realize that the 14-year-old girls they're chatting with on the Internet not only don't want to have sex with them, but that they're not 14-year-old girls at all? They're policemen! It's entrapment! But, um, that's a legal word I'm not fully knowledgeable about, so I'll leave that to the lawyers. But honestly, no teenage girl is thinking, Hey, this guy is middle-aged, balding and lives by himself in a one-room apartment—I'd like to have sex with him! Still, the stories keep coming.

Next on my mind is that nothing could be worse than being molested by a priest as a boy. Well, all right, being molested by your doctor could be worse if only because of what they charge these days, and your folks are paying him, for God's sake. So if I hear about a young boy being molested by a member of the clergy, I feel very bad for him. Sure, I think if it had been me I would have put up a bit of a row, but, OK, I'll assume it all happened so fast and was such a shock that it was over before he knew what was happening.

"Your button's undone," said the soon-to-be-killed student.

SEE FRED LIVE IN THE SHOW ELVIS AND JULIET IN NEW YORK CITY THIS MONTH!

But it is almost never a one-time deal with these things. It always seems to have happened over a period of 10 or 12 years. In the choir room, then in the rectory, then in a hotel room, then several times on a camping trip... I would think that somewhere along the line you'd say, "Just you and me on a fishing trip this weekend, Father? Uh, I think I'll just stay home and hang out with the guys." But I've never walked a mile in those shoes, and there may have been candy involved.

Well, as long as I've gone this far, I have to tell you that a song keeps going through my head: "Kids! What's the matter with kids today?" That's what Paul Lynde sang in the show Bye Bye Birdie. And that's what I'm thinking when I hear that some kid has blown the whistle after having sex with his teacher. Now, these aren't the teachers we remember: the gray-haired women who would rap your knuckles with a ruler. These all seem to be good-looking young women; I'm not even sure why some of them chose to be teachers in the first place. But maybe it's not the "victims" that do the whistle-blowing. Maybe it's one of their jealous buddies. Because you know these kids brag to their friends that they scored with the pretty teacher. And then when these cases go to trial, the prosecutors always act outraged in court. They're only outraged that it never happened to them when they were in school. I don't know if that's a fact, but I'd say it's pretty likely. Whatever the case may be, I do want to remind these kids that, haven't you heard? No one likes a tattletale.

Well, that's it for now. My new neighbor left her bedroom window shades up again, so I better go over and check to make sure she's all right. You never can tell who's going to be prowling around nice neighborhoods like mine these days.

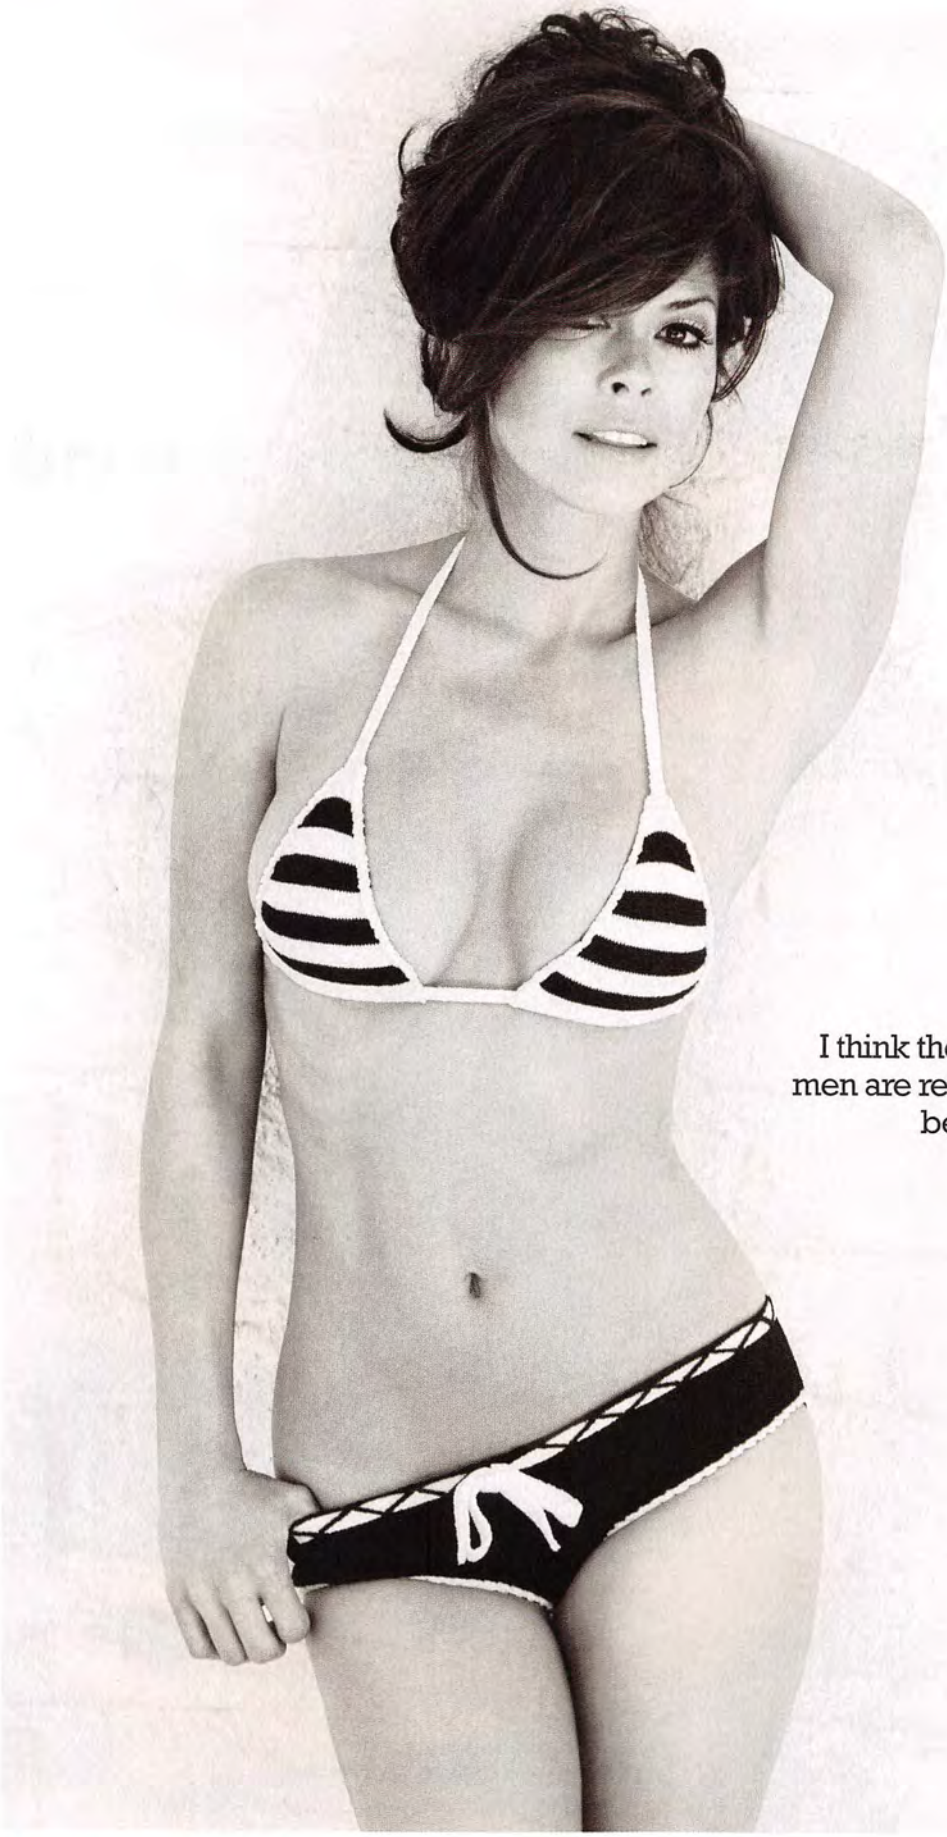
Brooke Burke suits up for another season of the hit show Rock Star. And you wonder why we're such big music fans.

BY JESSICA HUNDLEY
PHOTOGRAPHS BY MICHAEL WILLIAMS



Brooke Burke is part Traveling Wilbury and part Iggy Pop: The bronzed beauty has circled the world and looks great in leather. Brooke was a model with hopes of becoming a news anchor when she stumbled into a gig on E!'s rock 'n' roll travel show, Wild On. There was a time when the mention of Brooke's name would conjure up images of her gallivanting to some Mediterranean hot spot and talking to very tan, very attractive, very drunk people. But that was then.

Today, Brooke is teaming up with cohost Dave Navarro for another season of the hit reality show Rock Star, and she is the star of a string of hugely successful Burger King spots featuring her in a skimpy bikini cavorting with your favorite freaky corporate mascot. Brooke continues to explore pop culture's wild and woolly frontier, and we're happy just to sit back and watch.

"I think there's something that men are really attracted to about being natural."

STUFF: Tell us about the photo shoot. These pictures of yours are pretty racy.
BROOKE: I don't know if they're racy enough! It is Stuff, after all. But I loved doing this shoot. I've been wanting to do a Brigitte Bardot kind of vibe for a while now. There's something about Brigitte that really inspires me. She was effortlessly sexy, you know? My look has never really been stylized.
You think guys prefer au natural?
I think there's something that men are really attracted to about being natural. But I love playing with this '60s look, like you've just gotten out of bed. It was a nice contrast with the look I have for Rock Star. In real life, I'm definitely a jeans or miniskirt with boots kind of girl.
What's happening with the show this season?
We've got Tommy Lee and Dave Navarro putting together a supergroup. God knows what's going to happen when you get those guys together. It's going to be all these rockers and little ol' me in the middle of it all. I mean, Tommy Lee and Dave Navarro—come on!
It almost sounds like too much rock for one woman to handle.
I know! I don't know how Pam and Carmen did it all those years, and now I've got both guys this summer! It should be interesting. Dave's actually really nice—very real and genuine and witty. He brings a rock credibility to the show that I certainly don't have. I think that makes it a stronger show. Reality TV is such a phenomenon, and we Americans love to watch people getting humiliated. It's our guilty pleasure. But our show is different in that it's giving people a chance at real fame.
Did you want to be a rock star when you were a kid?
I have no musical talent, but I'd love to be able to do it. Doesn't everyone? And I've never dated a rock star, but I'm sure it's pretty amazing. There's definitely something seductive about a man with a guitar. ↘

What do you think that is, exactly? What makes someone a rock star?
It's something magical. They can be bizarre and off-the-wall, but they also have to connect with the audience and do it in a big way. You just know it in your gut when someone has it. That's my layman's opinion, anyway. In a lot of ways, I'm far from that world. I have kids, so I'm rock 'n' roll by day and a full-blown family woman by night. That's my real life. It's so funny to hear people's perceptions from the outside looking in. When I was on Wild On, people thought I was this crazy girl partying all over the world. And I did, don't get me wrong. But what people didn't realize was that I was pregnant and sober for two seasons. That was challenging, let me tell you. Now it's rock 'n' roll, then bedtime stories at 8 P.M. How sexy is that?

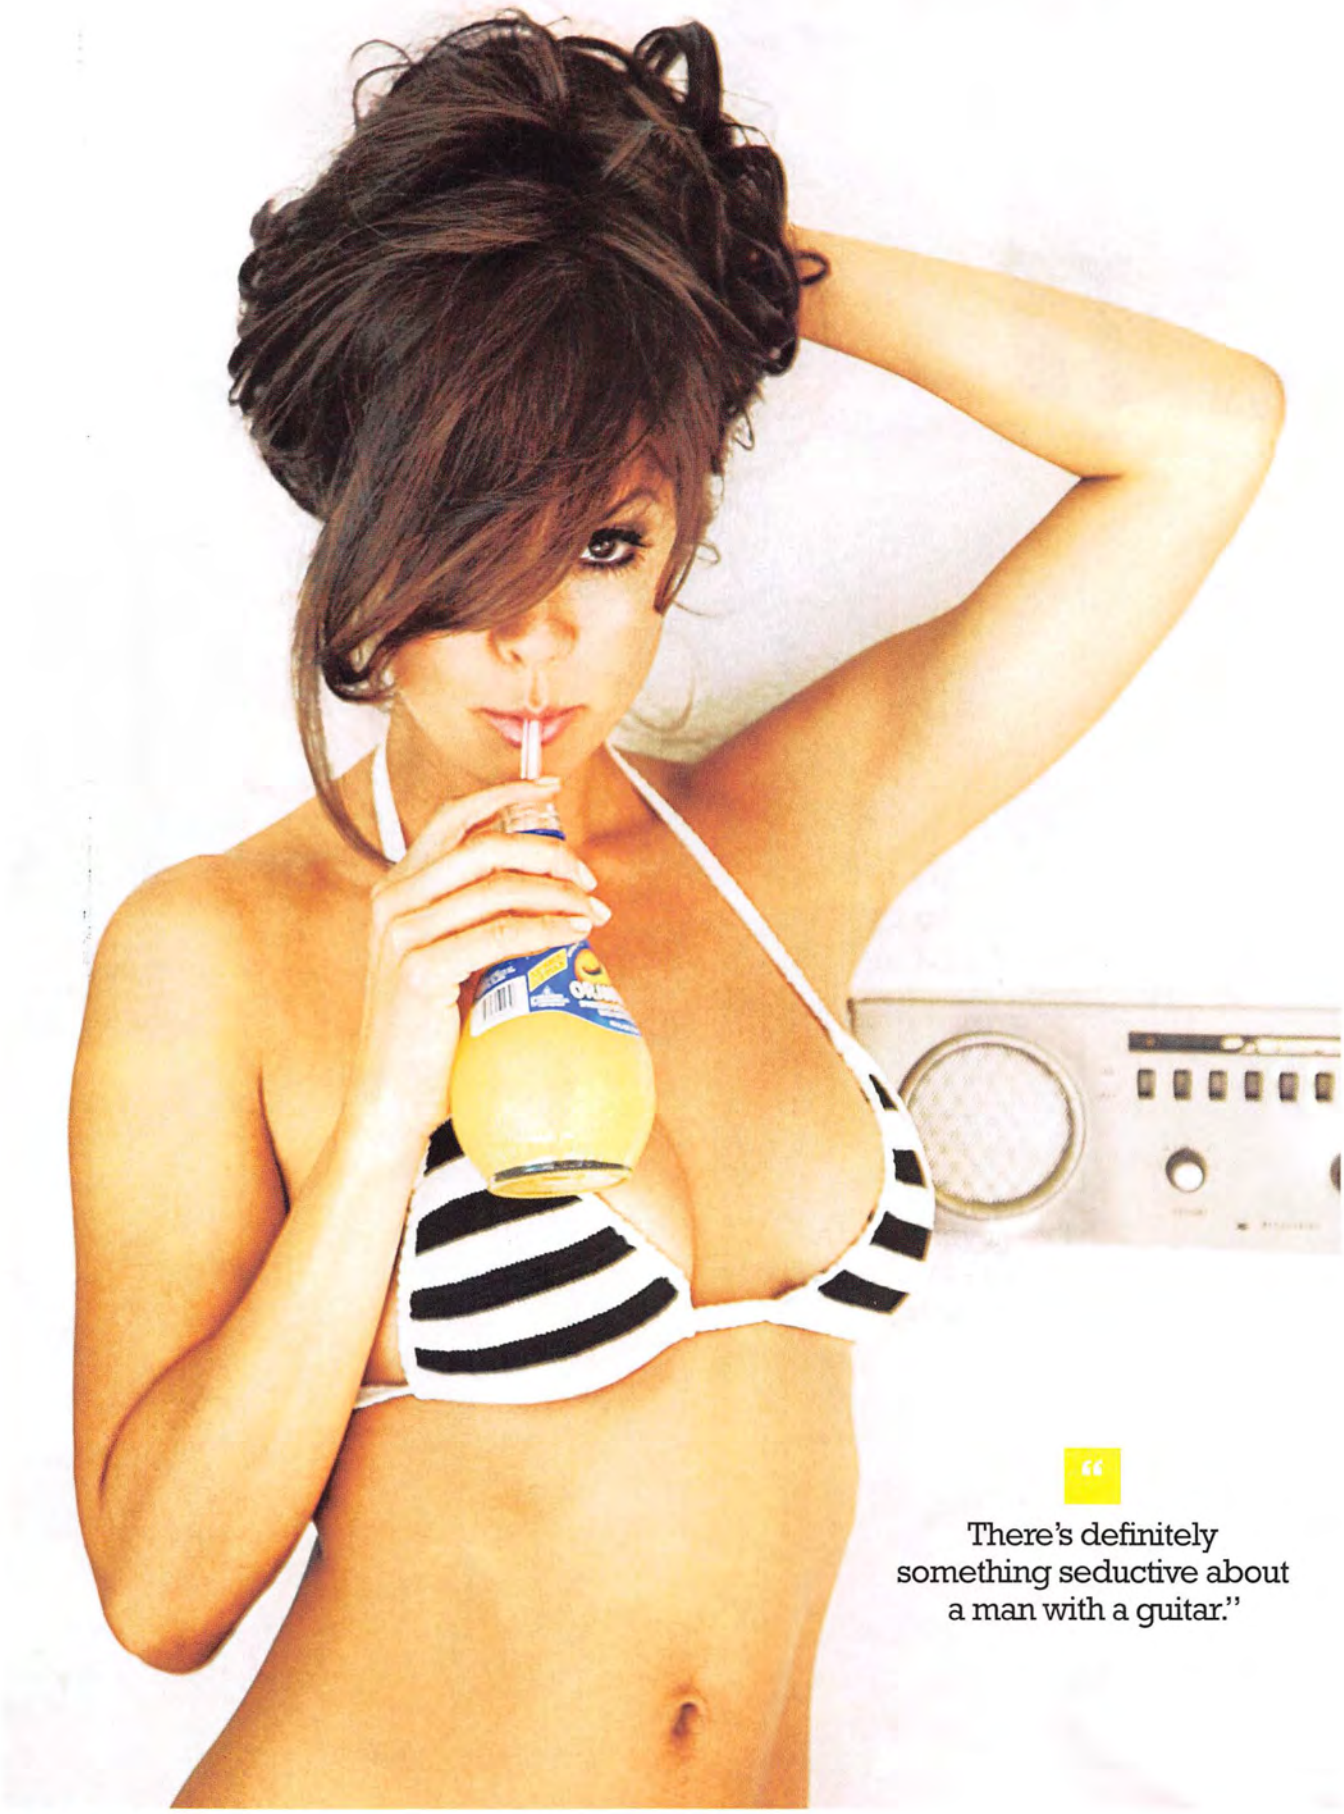
It must put all the bullshit in perspective at least.
Yes, and we happen to have a lot of bullshit around here. But I leave all the bullshit in the city. Once I come home, that's the end of it—although the bullshit is kind of fun sometimes.

Is it us, or is the Burger King dude terrifying?
He is a little creepy. When we first started working together, I wasn't quite sure how to communicate with him, but we developed such a relationship that now I have a blast. You know, the first time I've ever felt completely invisible was with him. We went to a Lakers game, and it was as if I didn't even exist. If I ever want to lay low, I know who to take with me.

Were you a little jealous?
It was great! Sometimes it's cool to have no one know who you are.

How did you prepare for your role as a sesame-seed bun in the Burger King commercial? What was your motivation?
Shit. I didn't use my method training! [Laughs] After that commercial came out, I went to pick my daughter up from preschool, and the little kids were shouting, "We saw your mommy in a hamburger!" And I thought, Now I know I've truly arrived. I've done a lot of interesting things in my life, but now I can say I've played a sesame-seed bun. Now I've really made it!

"I've never dated a rock star, but I'm sure it's pretty amazing."



"There's definitely something seductive about a man with a guitar."

Trouble Man

The most trusted name in cable news is now the most trusted name on your bookshelf.

BY MIKE OLSON PHOTOGRAPHY BY NIGEL PARRY @ CPI

Last year was insane. From tsunamis and hurricanes to the insurgency in Iraq, all manner of calamity reared its ugly head in 2005. During all the madness, one of the few constants was Anderson Cooper on our TV screens. Unlike other talking heads on the front lines, he delivered the news in a sincere way that stood out. Viewers recognized it, making Cooper the breakaway star of cable news. Now the host of CNN's Anderson Cooper 360° has a new book, Dispatches from the Edge: A Memoir of War, Disasters, and Survival. In it, Cooper shares stories from the scenes of last year's tragedies while also looking back at the deaths of his own father and older brother and the start of his journalism career. He took time out from informing the masses to talk with us.

STUFF: Your book can get a little depressing. Are you a total stick-in-the-mud at cocktail parties?
ANDERSON: [Laughs] Actually, I don't even go to cocktail parties. I'm kind of a loser in social situations. But yeah, the subject matter is pretty serious. I just didn't want to write that sort of cheesy book that's easy to churn out.
Why didn't you write a really boring book like Tim Russert?
[Laughs] I haven't read his book.
Neither have we, but the back seems really boring.
So all you have to do is read the back? Then I'm in trouble.
In a press release, HarperCollins describes you as "a prototype for a 21st-century newsman." Please translate that for us.
Oy. I don't know what that means, frankly. Although maybe the prototype for a 21st-century newsman wouldn't know what that means. There you go. Maybe there's layers to it.
Last year was obviously crazy. What was the most boring thing that happened to you in 2005?
I find getting my hair cut to be the most boring. The thing I don't like about it is it constantly seems to happen. Like, every three weeks.
CNN does groom you, right?
We have an extensive grooming process. [Laughs] What are you talking about? I work in basic cable.
You're telling us you have to pay for your own haircuts?
Of course! Do you think someone shaves me every morning? We're pretty bare-bones, but I like it this way. I mean, I take the subway to work. The thing I find about this job is that I don't really have time to see friends, so the subway allows you interaction with people.
Are they friendly?
People are really nice. What's interesting about being on television is that it makes living in New York similar to living in Mayberry. It's like, "Hey, Andy" when I'm on the street.
What do you think of all the billboards with your face on them around New York?
I try not to notice that sort of thing. It's a little weird, but I just don't pay attention. I haven't sat there and gazed at them fondly.
In the book, you mention all the celebrities who showed up in the wake of Hurricane Katrina. Does any one encounter stand out as the most bizarre?
Steven Seagal. A cop car pulls up, and I'm thinking, Weird, that guy looks like Steven Seagal. Then I realize that it is Steven Seagal. And it's not just Steven Seagal; it's Steven Seagal in uniform out on patrol with the Jefferson Parish SWAT team. I was oddly transfixed, so I went up to him. He was like, "Yeah, I'm just out here doing my thing. I don't want to make a big deal out of it." The next day I saw him on MSNBC with Rita Cosby. I'm like, Oh, OK. Real D.L. Then when he leaves, he makes eye contact and does a little Buddhist bow—that little sensei thing. [Laughs] It's hard to beat that one.
You've said before that an event jumps the shark once Ricky Martin shows up. Did these disasters become sideshows?
It was actually very limited and, frankly, it's now at the point where I'm all for any celebrities that go down there, because they need as much attention as they can get.
So does the American public not care anymore?
I was just down in New Orleans, and there were about 10,000 college kids on their spring break volunteering instead of going to Cancun and, you know, taking off their tops for Joe Francis. To me, that's a sign that people do care.
Well, there are 51 other weeks in the year when you can take your top off for Joe Francis.
[Laughs] Yes, there's always time for that, I suppose.
What do you think about tabloids?
There's nothing wrong with sneaking a peek, but it seems like there's a lot of obsession about the same four people. I don't know them, but it doesn't seem like they're all that interesting.
If you didn't have your job, what would you be doing?
I have no actual skills, so I don't have many options. That's the great thing about a liberal-arts education: One graduates without skills.
You did do a good job grilling Vin Diesel when you subbed for Regis. Maybe that's an option.
I can take Vin. [Laughs] It's a whole different kind of thing to fumble my way through. But it's fun.
Do you ever go on vacation?
I just went to Morocco. I had always wanted to try a camel safari. They are miserable animals. It's like a glorified pony ride. There's a guy holding onto the camel while you're riding, and he's on his cell phone. It's totally not Lawrence of Arabia. I was sitting in a bedouin tent getting e-mail. It was ridiculous.
How long before you burn out because of your schedule?
I don't know what the life span is. Another anchor said to me, "They never give you the crown." There's never a moment in this business when you feel comfortable.
You were just an answer on Wheel of Fortune, so you must have some staying power.
Really? You know, as a former Jeopardy! champion, it's hard for me to watch Wheel of Fortune. See how I worked that into the conversation?
How long ago was that?
It was quite long ago for me to still be talking about it. [Laughs] And it was the dumbed-down version. Like Washington, politico Jeopardy!
Whom did you take down?
Maria Bartiromo and Kweisi Mfume. I crushed them. It got to the point where I was giving clues during the commercial breaks—how to work the buzzer and things like that. I was pissed because there was no Tournament of Champions. It just ended.

> "I have no actual skills. That's the great thing about a liberal-arts education: One graduates without skills."

The Awesome Guide to Being a Rock Star

Let these commandments from music's legends start you on your way to stardom.

1 THOU SHALT SPEND YOUR MONEY WISELY

"I probably knew I was a rock star when I got my first check. We had finished up the Shout at the Devil tour, and it was a lot of fucking money. At least a couple million dollars, if I'm right. It was like, 'Holy shit! I'm living in an apartment.' You're on tour for 18 months, so you don't realize that money is coming in. I went out and wrote a check for a Ferrari that I didn't even know I wanted." VINCE NEIL, LEAD SINGER, MÖTLEY CRÜE

2 THOU SHALT INSPECT YOUR GROUPIES CAREFULLY

"I met a girl and we were getting along nicely. We went into the back of the bus and proceeded to fool around. The pants came off and her legs were amazingly hairy. Like, worse than man-hairy. It kind of freaked me out. I just said, 'I gotta do something—I'll be right back,' and I never came back. I can handle a little hair, but this was like Sasquatch hair. It was ridiculous." JERRY CANTRELL, LEAD GUITARIST, ALICE IN CHAINS

3 THOU SHALT WEAR SOMETHING TIGHT

"I've got enough going on in my pants that it's never been a problem. I'm no Tommy Lee, but who is? There have been some outfits I've worn that left nothing to the imagination. There was this one yellow spandex outfit where you could not only tell I was circumcised, but you could tell which doctor did the work." DEE SNIDER, LEAD SINGER, TWISTED SISTER

4 THOU SHALT ALWAYS COME OUT AHEAD

"We had the Guinness Record for an indoor crowd: 158,000 people in São Paulo, Brazil. That's six times bigger than Madison Square Garden. If 158,000 Brazilians all clap at the same time, it's deafening. It was insane. I think there were four people killed at that concert and six births. So we came out plus-two on that." ALICE COOPER

5 THOU SHALT BEWARE THE ELEMENTS

"Outside of Lexington, Kentucky, a tornado struck a garment factory and airlifted 100,000 sets of bras and panties outside our backstage door. We were trapped by lingerie. Now, that's backward."

BILLY GIBBONS, GUITARIST, ZZ TOP

6 THOU SHALT ENJOY THE BENEFITS

"Look What the Cat Dragged In went to three million copies sold, and I was walking to the stage with an extremely hot exotic dancer on my arm. Finally, a hot chick who wasn't looking for the BBD—the bigger, better deal. I was the bigger, better deal. We were making the video for 'I Won't Forget You,' and 83,000 people were chanting, 'Poison! Poison!' Later that night when I woke up from my drunken stupor, dancer still by my side, it dawned on me that I wasn't dreaming." BRET MICHAELS, LEAD SINGER, POISON

7 THOU SHALT NEVER LET YOUR BANDMATES LEAVE YOU BEHIND

"We used to have chicks under the stage when we were in the round. During the audience-participation bit, me and Rick Allen would miss out because we were upstairs doing the show. The other guys were under the stage having Polaroids taken with moms and daughters, because sometimes the girl would be 17 and mom would only be 34. It was a regular occurrence back then, but it was all slap-and-tickle. None of this Mötley Crüe stuff." JOE ELLIOTT, LEAD SINGER, DEF LEPPARD

JOSH EPPARD
DRUMMER
COHEED AND CAMBRIA

What music do you listen to when you're hungover?
"Whether you're heartbroken, hungover or just fucked-up, Snoop Doggy Dogg's Doggystyle always makes you feel better."

8 THOU SHALT ALWAYS STAY CLOTHED

"I took my pants off one night in 1986. I thought, Here we go, I'm going to do it. It's going to shock the crowd. Honestly, nobody cared. It wasn't shocking to the audience at all. And your dick shrivels up." WAYNE COYNE, LEAD SINGER, THE FLAMING LIPS

9 THOU SHALT BEWARE OF VANS

"We finished a record in-store in Tampa and jumped in the van to leave, and these fucking chicks had taken the distributor cap off so it wouldn't start. So we get in the van and there's six chicks there, stripped down naked. We had our fun with the girls, and we had to get

ROCK STAR STATS

$70 MILLION Amount Elton John spent every 20 months during the 1980s on various items—including mountains of cocaine another car to come grab us. But how smart is that?! To take the distributor cap off the van!" VINCE NEIL, LEAD SINGER, MÖTLEY CRÜE

10 THOU SHALT REALLY BEWARE THE DEDICATED GROUPIE

"In the '70s, this one girl sent herself to us by UPS. She was in the truck, but she had pizza in a box. I think she was eating it to stay alive. We gave her a lollipop and told her to go home." ROBIN ZANDER, LEAD SINGER, CHEAP TRICK

11 THOU SHALT USE THE BATHROOM BEFORE GOING ONSTAGE

"We came back for an encore at Lollapalooza. I had eaten a burrito with extra jalapeños, and it started moving, if you know what I mean. I had to exit the stage, so I told the guys to keep playing and jumped on a bucket right in the back. I heard Layne say, 'You'll have to excuse us, people, but our guitar player had to take a shit.'" JERRY CANTRELL, LEAD GUITARIST, ALICE IN CHAINS

12 THOU SHALT WEAR A CODPIECE

"I used to wear a cup. I have seen guys in hair bands during the '80s where I would have gone, '$100 says that's fake!' There was definitely a cucumber or something. I was the first one to use a codpiece. We were doing it pre–Clockwork Orange, so when I saw the movie I went, 'Hey, that's mine!'" ALICE COOPER

13 THOU SHALT KNOW YOUR AUDIENCE

"I think the biggest rock star moment is when you sell out Madison Square Garden or maybe Hollywood Bowl. You look at the audience and there's every major rock star watching your show. We drew the strangest crowd because

RYAN KEY
VOCALIST
YELLOWCARD

Who is the biggest rock star of all time?

"Axl Rose. He did tons of drugs, dated tons of models and made the rest of the band bail on him. Rock stars are a thing of the past, but I think Axl would be the biggest feature in the rock-star museum, if they built one."

"No coasters? This is why we can't have nice things!"

String Cheese and Strippers

Rock stars make bizarre demands. Use these examples from real tour riders as your guide.

GUNS N' ROSES—One carton Dunhill cigarettes; two cartons Marlboro Red cigarettes (hard pack); one carton Camel filter cigarettes (hard pack); assortment of adult magazines

JAY-Z—Two late-model stretch limousines

AEROSMITH—"Police escorts must be arranged in order to facilitate artist arrival to and departure from the venue. This escort must be empowered to route the artist through any potential traffic tie-up"

SNOOP DOGG—Ice cream (vanilla); a Sony PlayStation

METALLICA—Two bars good dark-chocolate candy; two boxes tissues (cube-shaped, if possible)

JANE'S ADDICTION—Dressing rooms must have an earthy, velvet/velour-type atmosphere

JA RULE—"Purchaser shall provide, at no cost to artist, a balloon drop (1,500-count, red and black in color) and confetti shot (40 pounds)"; one box Philly Blunts

COLDPLAY—Eight stamped, local postcards; eight pairs dark, cotton socks, size 9–11

NINE INCH NAILS—"Two boxes of cornstarch (VERY IMPORTANT!)"

P. DIDDY—Napkins with P. Diddy's name printed on all of them; two bottles Hennessy cognac; one bottle Cristal champagne; one gallon milk

KISS—All drivers are to be English-speaking

THE ROLLING STONES—"The band lounge should contain one full-size Snooker table with a full set of cues, bridges, chalk and racks; five video-type games, including a driving game, a pinball machine, a combat game, a virtual-reality game and a game suitable for small children; a ping-pong table if space allows"

BUSTA RHYMES—One box Lifestyles or Rough Rider condoms (ribbed); one 24-piece of Boston Market or Kentucky Fried Chicken and biscuits

OUTKAST—Linen napkins and table coverings are required—no plastic, paper or Styrofoam; six Bic disposable lighters; six packs sugarless gum; soft toilet paper

VAN HALEN—"One pound of assorted fresh, natural cheeses, including Jack, Muenster, Cheddar and Brie (all cheese in blocks, not cubed or sliced)"

PHARRELL WILLIAMS—20 crates Grey Goose vodka; 15 magnums Perrier Jouët Belle Epoque champagne; 20 crates Bacardi rum; belly dancers

CREED—One bag Sargento string cheese; one case Hi-C assorted fruit juices

The Great Rock Test

What member of the band are you? To find out, just mark your answers, then check out the answer key at right to find your proper place in the rock 'n' roll food chain.

1. IT'S SNORTING TIME BACKSTAGE. YOU:
A ■ Do all of someone else's blow.
B ■ Get pissed because someone else did all of your blow.
C ■ OD.
D ■ Snort it off a groupie.

2. DURING BORING GROUP INTERVIEWS, YOU:
A ■ Say things like, "I just want to rock, man."
B ■ Attempt to quote Allen Ginsberg.
C ■ Sit there quietly because no one cares what you think.
D ■ Spontaneously combust.

3. WHERE DO YOU SLEEP ON THE TOUR BUS?
A ■ Next to the bathroom.
B ■ Between your manager's wife and his daughter.
C ■ You have no idea. You just wake up in the next city.
D ■ Next to the driver, to whom you won't stop talking no matter how much he begs.

4. IN YOUR BAND'S LEAKED SEX TAPE, YOU ARE:
A ■ Seen with three girls at once.
B ■ Battling whiskey dick.
D ■ Wearing a Viking hat, attacking a lamppost.

5. IN-STORE PROMOTIONS ARE:
A ■ Great ways to meet chicks.
B ■ Great opportunities to connect with the fan base.
C ■ Great things to avoid.
D ■ Great places to piss on the Celine Dion section.

6. YOUR LAST MEETING WITH A RECORD EXECUTIVE WAS AWKWARD BECAUSE YOU:
A ■ Banged his secretary.
B ■ Vomited on his shoe.
C ■ Had nothing to say to a "suit."
D ■ Crashed your Ferrari into the building.

7. YOUR WAITER BRINGS YOUR HAMBURGER ON A SEEDED BUN WHEN YOU SPECIFICALLY ASKED FOR A NONSEEDED BUN. YOU:
A ■ Throw it in his face.
B ■ Have your manager throw it in his face.
C ■ Shrug and eat it anyway.
D ■ Karate chop him in the throat.

8. THE BAND JUST WON VIDEO OF THE YEAR! YOU:
A ■ Take the stage and happily accept your award.
B ■ Joke about how it'll make a great doorstop.
C ■ Look off disaffectedly even though you're so excited you're about to soil yourself.
D ■ Fall into the orchestra pit and get impaled on a trombone.

WHO ARE YOU?

IF YOU ANSWERED MOSTLY PINK, YOU'RE THE...
Guitarist! You're aggressive, you like to drink, you like to screw and you can barely form a sentence. When your band tanks, your Porsche will be repossessed and you'll be painting houses for a living. But who cares? You rocked Detroit, dude!

IF YOU ANSWERED MOSTLY BLUE, YOU'RE THE...
Lead singer! You're arrogant—you don't care who you piss off or who loves you. You know you're a genius and you know you're well-hung. You really don't care that the sex tape of you and a model was leaked.

all the movie stars saw us as vaudeville. Groucho Marx, Mae West, Jack Benny—people like that. They weren't shocked at anything. The rest of the audience was gasping, and these guys were going, 'I saw that in 1922. I remember we were on the road in Toledo…'" ALICE COOPER

14 THOU SHALT AVOID PERU AT ALL COSTS

"When I was in Santana, we were supposed to play this festival in Peru. The first day, Carlos and I were experiencing the first real cocaine that we had ever had. You just do one pop and you're good for, like, two days. So we're just partying out, and the government says, 'We'd like to get you to customs to check some paperwork.' We get down there and they separate all of us. I'm looking out this window at a building across the way, and I see Carlos leaning his head out the window yelling for help. The next thing we knew, we were being deported with machine guns to our heads." NEAL SCHON, GUITARIST, SANTANA; COFOUNDER, JOURNEY

15 THOU SHALT BE CAREFUL BACKSTAGE

"Unless you want naked women backstage, they don't just happen to be there. That's the unspoken rule. What usually happens is more like the end of the Rolling Stones movie—it's, like, some giant fat guy who's zonked out on 20 hits of LSD gets naked. Then some ginormous fat girl dying for attention gets naked. And they just want to rub their sweaty bodies up against you. The last thing you think of is having sex; you kind of want to throw up. That's usually what happens when you encourage nudity." WAYNE COYNE, LEAD SINGER, THE FLAMING LIPS

ZACKY VENGEANCE
GUITARIST
AVENGED SEVENFOLD

What do you listen to when you're hungover?
"I would probably throw in something by Johnny Cash. 'Sunday Morning Coming Down' would be a good hangover song. It kind of makes you want to start drinking again to kill your hangover."

16 THOU SHALT FORGET

"To be quite honest, I've had many nights where you go to bed way after the sun comes up but two days later you can't remember them. So unless somebody says, 'Remember that time when we were in Las Vegas?' and I go 'Oh, fuck, yeah,' I won't remember it. I have very fond memories of a few things in my career, but I've got big holes that I can't remember. When you've played 4,500 concerts in 26 years, it's like trying to remember what you had for breakfast in 1981." JOE ELLIOTT, LEAD SINGER, DEF LEPPARD

17 THOU SHALT QUIT WHEN YOU'RE AHEAD

"There's a period where you have to say, 'I'm either going to live or I'm going to die.' But, of course, that's the rock 'n' roll creed. The rock star was royalty in the '70s. If you survived it, you became rock royalty." ALICE COOPER

SHAVO ODADJIAN
BASSIST
SYSTEM OF A DOWN

What's your favorite music video of all time?
"Van Halen's 'Hot for Teacher.' It's the best 'cause it had actual concepts. And there's that huge guitar solo in the library."

MODEL WORSHIP

Briana Hicks, star of MTV's 8th & Ocean, slinks from your television screen to the big time.

The Real World is entertaining and all, but recently something just hasn't felt right. Sure, each season this founding father of reality-television shows features more and more young, immature and psychotic houseguests who like to get into fights, drink to excess and hook up with each other, but can't they be hotter? Is this really as attractive as a reality-show cast can get? Such were the questions that gnawed at us. That is, until 8th & Ocean showed up on MTV.

The concept is pretty damn simple. Ten professional models from the prestigious Irene Marie agency load all of their baggage—both literal and metaphorical—into a sweet beachfront apartment complex. From there, we get to follow these would-be supermodels as they pound the pavement trying to book high-profile jobs and make their bones in the cutthroat industry. It's a lot like The Real World, except they've replaced the "real" people with gorgeous ones, changed the location from boring cities like Austin and Philadelphia to Miami's übertrendy South Beach and then added a few pounds of eyeliner.

There were plenty of highlights in the show's first season. Take Britt, the wide-eyed girl from Kansas who was too ashamed to go clubbing because—as we later learned in a tearful confession—she never learned how to dance. Or Kelly and Sabrina, the identical twins torn apart by skincare issues and the prospect of breast augmentation. But despite the abundance of melodrama and eye candy, no single cast member won us over quite like 21-year-old Briana Hicks.

If you're familiar with the show, you might remember Briana as the girl who seemed to be surgically attached to her Sidekick. Likewise, Briana had an uncanny ability to avoid all of the drama that surrounded her flaky castmates. An Arizona native, this five-foot-nine stunner quickly established herself as the most stylish of the 8th & Ocean crew—no small feat considering that every second of the show was dripping with cool. The exotic Briana is clearly on the verge of landing huge campaigns that will make her a household name, so we realized that we could either A) sit idly by while she made said name for herself or B) showcase her wares to the world with this amazing set of photographs. We chose B.

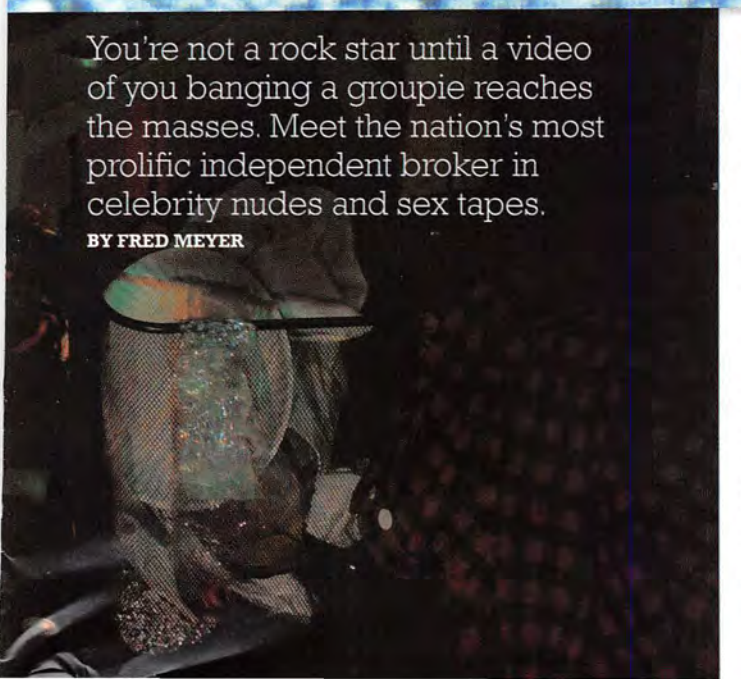
SMUT

You're not a rock star until a video of you banging a groupie reaches the masses. Meet the nation's most prolific independent broker in celebrity nudes and sex tapes.

BY FRED MEYER



It may rank as one of the worst days in Paris Hilton's life, and she wasn't even there. On a Saturday in November, an employee of a Los Angeles–area self-storage facility opened the door to a locker for five seconds and then slammed it shut. A few dozen prospective buyers took mental snapshots and moved on to the next locker.

By California law, when a renter doesn't make the payments on a storage space, the materials are auctioned off to the highest bidder. It's estate-sales prospecting, with a small coterie of regular bidders hoping to find valuable furniture, jewelry or anything they can sell. They don't know who rented the locker or what's in it, other than what they can glean from that five-second peek.

This particular locker sold for $2,775. What the winners found, however, may be worth in excess of $20 million.

The forgotten locker was Paris Hilton's, a space she used in 2004 when moving from one Hollywood Hills hideaway to another. The winning bidders contacted a law firm, who brought in a private detective, who called David Hans Schmidt. Now Hilton has America's most rabid celebrity predator licking his chops.

"Celebrities would regard him as a lower life form. He goes deeper than most because he gets them undressed," says New York Daily News gossip columnist George Rush, a cohort who often receives the first call when Schmidt has news to leak. Some celebs

PHOTOGRAPHY: (EDITING ROOM) SATOSHI. PROP STYLING: ANTONIO BALLATORE @ CELESTINE.

Schmidt launched a whole new industry with the release of Tonya Harding and Jeff Gillooly's sex tape.

It didn't take long for the hackers who got their hands on Fred Durst's sex tape to turn on Schmidt.

According to Schmidt, the pictures he sold of Pfc. Jessica Lynch show that "she's trailer-park."

As we went to press, Schmidt was in litigation over a sex tape he has of Colin Farrell with an ex-girlfriend.

come to him to cash in; others have no idea Schmidt has entered their lives. But when he does, the details Schmidt has are often very private.

"I am not your quintessential agent," Schmidt explains. "I don't wear a tie and suspenders like those insecure fucks on Wilshire Boulevard with William Morris or Creative Artists. They get 10 percent for sitting on their asses." This from a man who once appeared bare-chested and wielding a medieval battle-ax in media photos to champion a client's grievance with the local government. It's safe to say he goes the extra mile. But it's not Schmidt who sifted through a Dumpster outside Jamie Foxx's house and found shots of the star allegedly pleasuring himself, or stole a sex tape off Fred Durst's computer. His clients have, though.

"SIMPLY PUT, I HAVE PARIS OVER A BARREL."

THE PEDDLING BEGINS...

Schmidt, a stockier version of Cosmo-era Burt Reynolds who modeled back in the '80s, will sell anything, but his stock in trade is nudes. The list of headline hotties (and not-so-hotties) he's worked with reads like a who's who of gossip trash. Darva Conger, winner of Who Wants to Marry a Multi-Millionaire?; alleged Bill Clinton ex-paramours Gennifer Flowers and Paula Jones; Hugh Grant hooker Divine Brown; and Frank Gifford's huge-honkered mistress Suzen Johnson all negotiated deals with either Playboy or Penthouse thanks to Schmidt.

If you're a female in the news, Schmidt is thinking about you. When Amber Frey emerged as Scott Peterson's mistress, so did nude photos. (Schmidt attempted to sell them on his Web site, but Frey's lawyers shut him down.) Rescued army POW Pfc. Jessica Lynch was the toast of the nation in 2003 when Schmidt surfaced with some topless shots of her and sold them to Larry Flynt. "There's one shot of her bending over, mooning, with a thong on. There's a soldier behind her, acting like he's doing her doggie-style," he says. "She's trailer-park."

At first, Schmidt had to hustle for clients, like his first, Gennifer Flowers. He saw her on the cover of a tabloid in 1992, and there it was, shooting through his brain: Maybe someone will pay her a million bucks to go nude. He signed Flowers to an exclusive contract on Valentine's Day, just days before Playboy got in touch. "I beat fucking Playboy at their own game. I was ahead of the giant, man!"

Flowers eventually posed for Penthouse. The deal gave Schmidt the contacts, and he had the unrepentant temperament to take it from there. After Flowers came Jones and a slew of other women ready to bare all. And then lightning struck.

BIRTH OF THE SEX TAPE

Most people would refuse the call if Jeff Gillooly was on the line. Not Schmidt. In 1994, he was the agent for Tonya Harding's ex. Gillooly was facing jail time months after hiring thugs to whack Nancy Kerrigan in the knee and, desperate for money, he wondered how he could cash in before his waning celebrity checked out. Schmidt's response was simple. "If you can get me some skin on the old lady, I'll make you a million on it." Two days later, Gillooly called back. Schmidt remembers him saying, "I got this 33-minute videotape of me and Tonya fucking on our wedding night. Do you think that'd be worth any money?"

Schmidt howled so loudly that building security rushed into his office, and, after he reviewed the tape, he immediately called then-Penthouse publisher Bob Guccione on his limo phone. On June 6, 1994, while the rest of the country was marking the 50th anniversary of D-Day, Schmidt says he was signing a contract with the magazine. Stills from the video appeared in the 25th-anniversary issue that September, and the tape itself was released as Tonya and Jeff's Wedding Night, generating enormous sales. Between that and the shenanigans of Pam Anderson and Tommy Lee, a new industry was born.

"I am amazed that there are so many of these tapes," says the Daily News' Rush. "If the world goes up in flames and there is one person left on earth, he'll probably want to watch a celebrity sex tape."

Schmidt was in a perfect position to become the smiling face of the tidal wave. He'd done so many deals, been on MSNBC and talk radio defending himself so often, been written about online so much that when someone with juicy material wanted to know who could turn their spoils into cash, the easy-to-find answer was David Hans Schmidt.

"EVERYBODY'S OPEN GAME"

The tapes might find him now, but Schmidt doesn't leave acquisitions completely to chance. He reaches out to limo drivers, journalists and anyone in constant contact with celebrities to let them know what he can do for them. It's a wide net, and it catches fish so often that, these days, just about any major celebrity sex tape or formerly personal set of photos has his stamp on it.

Once he's been contacted by someone with a scandal to sell, Schmidt heads to the lab. He's got CSI-type forensic analysis guys to compare blown-up images of the person on the tape to known photos of the celebrity. "If there's so much as a mole on there that's formed differently, then we know we don't have a match," says Schmidt. End of deal. There's no reason to go to jail over a sex tape.

Oddly enough, Schmidt, an ex-con who did time for harassing the mother of his two daughters (and negotiated a Tonya Harding/Paula Jones celebrity-boxing deal while he was in the can), found himself on the right side of the law over a tape starring rock star Fred Durst.

Last February, Schmidt claims he got a call from hackers who had scoured Durst's computer and found video of a not-so-limp Durst with a beautiful, unidentified brunette. Using cell phone scramblers to remain anonymous, they contacted Schmidt to help them broker cash for the tape. A few weeks later, even though he had barely made his pitch to Durst's people, they had convinced themselves Schmidt was cutting them out of the loop and keeping the cash from a sale.

That's when Schmidt says he received an ultimatum: Wire $10,000 to a numbered bank account in Ohio by close of business tomorrow or they would dump the tape online with Schmidt's home phone number. And they did. After a three-minute teaser, Web surfers were told, "For the rest of the tape, call David Hans Schmidt at..."

Schmidt was besieged with phone calls, including ones from the FBI and Secret Service. According to Schmidt, they said to him, "You're a victim of these guys, and they happen to be the same guys who hacked into Paris Hilton's T-Mobile system." To this day, the Durst hackers are still at large. All the phone numbers and e-mail addresses Schmidt gave the investigators amounted to nothing.

Schmidt gets some irate calls, too. The father of one of his subjects demanded to know how Schmidt would feel if he had naked pictures of one of Schmidt's daughters. His reply? "I would only hope you'd bring them to me so I could get my cut."

Despite the creepy comeback, children are the one area in which Schmidt has a conscience. The only reason he has rejected a project is the suspicion that someone on camera is underage. "I wouldn't want anyone exploiting my daughters." Then he adds, "But once they're 18, everybody's open game."

WHAT THE FUTURE HOLDS

The Durst situation might be over, but as of press time, Schmidt is tied down in litigation over a tape Colin Farrell doesn't want you to see—the Irish stud with his now ex-girlfriend, Playmate Nicole Narain. An anonymous client brought the tape to Schmidt. "He's going down on her while she's holding the camera," Schmidt explains. "He says, 'That's me breakfast, lunch and dinner, and I ain't fucking kidding!' It is so funny. I'm thinking about calling it Colin Farrell's Breakfast, Lunch and Dinner."

Oh, and Usher, pay attention—Schmidt says he's got video of you in a hotel room with two prostitutes that he obtained from one of your band members. Schmidt's sitting on it for now, but that could always change.

And now, of course, he's Paris Hilton's problem. Odds are Hilton will buy back the contents of her old locker. She should. The haul includes 53 undeveloped disposable cameras, 22 hours of videotape, plenty of medical and legal documents and, the coup de grace, 18 diaries full of intimate, juicy details of her personal life. Schmidt promises the contents include highly controversial material guaranteed to get her into very hot water. So, basically, don't expect them to ever see the light of day.

Paris Hilton has one tenacious guy on her trail, and he's aiming high. "Simply put, I have her over a fucking barrel." Schmidt quips, "I could keep my mouth closed for a long-term relationship with Paris Hilton. It's time I settle down. If Paris and I have one baby, then I'm a Hilton!"

LONG LIVE ODB

There's more to the Wu-Tang's legendary loose cannon than illegitimate children and a mile-long rap sheet. Here's the real story, from the people who knew him best.

You didn't know Ol' Dirty Bastard. Sure, it seemed like he was an open book—storming the stage in New York while on the run from the law; almost getting burned by pyrotechnics at the MTV Awards; getting arrested countless times for countless offenses; taking cameras with him to collect food stamps. By the time he died in 2004 from a toxic mixture of prescription and nonprescription drugs, Russell Jones was equal parts famous and infamous, forever in the public eye.

But believe it or not, there was a private ODB, too. The one who was uncommonly charismatic with women, sometimes to hilarious ends. The one who struggled with drugs. The one who took his religion seriously. The one who called his mother several times every day. The one who bought lunch for homeless people in his neighborhood. ODB was more than you knew. So here, thanks to those who were close to him, is a look at that other ODB.

ODB'S MOTHER AND THE BLUEPRINT FOR HIS STYLE

On whether ODB was a character or the real thing...

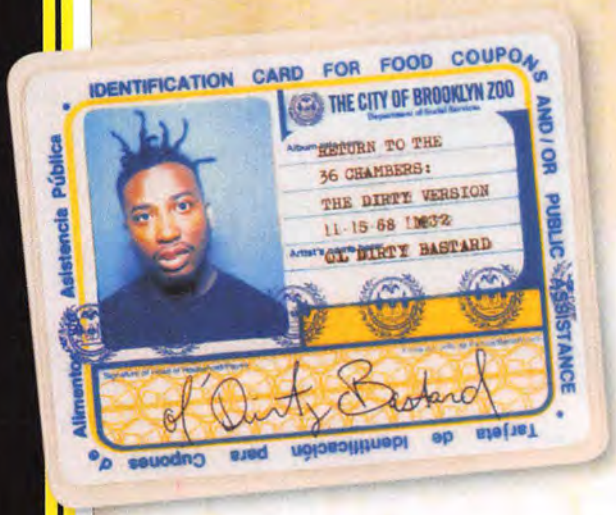
RZA: Over time, that personality dominated all the others, and it became detrimental. He was always going crazy—leave your girl, he's going to do it to her; leave your food, he gonna eat it.
JACOBSON: There was one show, when his first single had maybe just come out—he hadn't done a lot of shows by himself. I came into his dressing room to see if he needed anything, and he was standing in front of his mirror sparring with himself like a boxer, saying things like "You're the best, man. You're Dirty. You're Ol' Dirty Bastard." Part freestyling, part psyching himself up.

On the fairer sex...

RZA: He was having babies early. In 1990, he moved down to Florida with his girl. He went to work at Disney World, and then he helped build the Jaws ride at Universal and all that shit.
MONK: RZA always said one of Dirty's worst problems would be women. On the way to handling business, Dirty would get about 150 phone numbers. Out of those, I know I would see him with at least 30, 40, 50 women a week. Dirty was smashing, having sex coming across the Brooklyn Bridge, having sex with

BY JON CARAMANICA

Stuff Legend



ODB meets his destiny.

chicks in the back of the car all the way down the New Jersey Turnpike.

POSADA: He would bring in four or five girls at once and do one at a time while the others watched.

MONK: I got pictures of girls holding his dick in their mouths, looking at the camera. Some of them would act like they would never fuck him, and when I would go by his house, they'd be sitting there in one of his T-shirts with no panties on.

JACOBSON: I was with him at a convention down in Miami. We're at this party, and I hear Dirty call me over. I walk over to him, and it's dark, so I can't really see. I take a harder look, and I see he's got this girl on her knees giving him head.

MONK: Once, we were at Universal Studios in Florida. He fucked, like, 25, 30 bitches. He made all of them come, but did not come himself. The last one, when he pulled it out, the bitch passed out, boom, hit the floor. We dragged her out and left her by the elevator. I swear before God and my children.

> "DIRTY WAS SMASHING. I WOULD SEE HIM WITH 30, 40, 50 WOMEN A WEEK."

On some of ODB's more eccentric behavior...

ROSS: I remember once, on Hollywood Boulevard, he was walking across the street with a bottle of Cisco, with all these people just following him like the Pied Piper.

POSADA: The last time he got shot I showed up at the hospital, and as I'm walking in, the doors open and I hear somebody screaming, "He's climbing out the back window!" I run out to the parking lot, and there he is, naked, with the bandage barely on him. He jumps into his Range Rover, and he almost runs me over.

JACOBSON: We went to Brooklyn and did one of those MTV things. We had a limo going around his neighborhood, and he insisted we go to this check-cashing place and show he's getting paid, not realizing how fucked up it looked that he was cashing a welfare check. Dirty called me later that night—he wasn't worried about losing cred, he was worried about losing welfare.

RONSON: I remember talking to people at [Wu-Tang record label] Loud in the '90s, and they would say, "ODB's not going to make it to 2000."

On confrontation...

LIGHTY: We tried to put him on a record with LL Cool J. He came through twisted. He was talking gibberish on his rhyme and then gets mad at us because we weren't gonna record him like that. He started ripping gold and platinum plaques off the wall. And he definitely pissed on one of the plaques. At this point, he's off the Richter scale. The receptionist calls the police, so we get out of there. At the bottom of the elevator, he changes his whole tune. He was laughing his ass off.

ROSS: He'll fuck anyone's show up. He was the master of ruining your shit.

POSADA: He walks into Chung King Studio, and Onyx is in there, Big DS is in there. They're happy to see him. He's like, "Fuck that, put my shit in." And he starts performing his album in their session. They turn his tape off, he curses them out, picks Big DS up—that's a big dude—and throws him on the console, beats the crap out of him. Guns come out, cops had to be called.

On the making of Return to the 36 Chambers: The Dirty Version, his first album...

ROSS: One day he says to me, "I got my album cover," and he drops his welfare card on my desk.

ODB and Busta Rhymes on the set of a video in 1996.

POSADA: He would show up [to the recording studio] with a couple of girls, a gallon of gin and a gallon of orange juice and make a grand entrance. Then he'd take a swig of gin from one bottle, orange juice from the other, and shake it up in his mouth.

JACKSON: All you could do was latch on and get as much as you could in the time you had.

On the making of Nigga Please, his second album...

POSADA: The partying kind of took its toll; the second album was really difficult. He was very paranoid. The things that drugs do to you, they were more in effect on that album.

JONES: When a person is addicted to drugs, it's not easy.

HUGO: We weren't really in the studio with Dirty that much. He'd come in sometimes for, like, 10 minutes, or sometimes he'd be there from the night before. We'd come in, he'd have laid down some vocals and we'd make the beat around what he left, playing with it to make everything fit.

MONK: One day we go into the studio and we hear this noise. We're trying to figure out where it's coming from. I heard he was fucking this girl in the ass, and her head was hitting the big drum. I recorded the whole shit, and we used it on "Dirt Dog."

On musical creativity...

RZA: Dirt won many battles as a beatboxer. He was the human-beatbox specialist.

MONK: Dirty would take the wind and make it a beat if he could.

POSADA: He had this genius about him, a very determined vision. He held onto his vision no matter how much it went against the grain of technology. He would make you accept his rules if you worked with him.

JONES: He never listened to hip-hop, even when he got famous.

POSADA: He wouldn't listen to rappers—only to soul music—and he would drink and cry, listening to this music.

RONSON: I'd seen him singing on the VH1 documentary, and I had the best idea: I was going to have ODB sing "Build Me Up Buttercup." Everything else we did took three hours, but he did that in three minutes.

On taking care of family...

MONK: The more popular he became, the more everybody thought they could get out of him. When he was alive, he did something for everyone. All these people that are fronting like they never got nothing from him, every single fucking person is lying.

WEISFELD: His kids, for example—he was paying a ton of money in child support every month, but he would give them extra, hundreds and hundreds of dollars at a time.

> "HE SIGNED A RECORD DEAL IN PRISON JUST SO HIS KIDS COULD GET THE MONEY."

He couldn't say no to anybody, especially his kids. He signed a record deal in prison just so his kids could get the money.

On life after prison...

JONES: He died in jail. It destroyed his mind; it drove him crazy. He was completely different when he got out. He tried, but it wasn't Rusty. The fire was gone. I think they were trying to break him down, and they did just that.

DASH: When I first picked him up from jail, he was really into getting back into his career. But because he was so medicated, he wasn't animated the way he used to be. He had never made a verse without touching drugs or alcohol before. I don't want to say it was a problem, but it was definitely a challenge. We found ways to compensate for the drugs. He loved women, so we got strippers in there to get him happy, get him hyped.

WEISFELD: Toward the end of his life, he didn't have that many friends. He abandoned them because a lot of people were using him.

MELILLO: I feel like there was this whole person that we didn't know; he knew how to put on a face. And the times he needed help with stuff, he asked for it. He was reaching out because everything was about to go good for him, but he felt like he was fading.

On being the anti-ODB...

JONES: He was everyday people, down to earth. He walked Brooklyn streets, shopped at local stores. He was kindhearted; he would take the homeless to lunch.

POSADA: If he had, you had. His was yours, no question.

WEISFELD: Once the cameras turned on, he became ODB. It was all an act. It was hard on him. He was having a hard time judging when to go in and out of character. Of course, he just wanted to be regular Russell. He would take the subway by himself, take taxis. He was the most famous nonfamous person. I miss his phone calls the most. I would get 30, 40 a day, like, "I'm just calling to say hello."

POSADA: He was really a sweetheart—a humble, soft guy who was caring and loving. He experimented extensively with music, with drugs, with ways of promoting himself, with boundaries. But he was really about being free, outside of guidelines, outside of any control.

"My style icons are Puffy, Frank Sinatra, John Gotti, Jay-Z and Sammy Davis Jr.—he was fly. I take my cues from people like Andre 3000 and Big Boi, too; they do their own thing. I like when people can do the unexpected and pull it off. Everybody can't do the same thing. A lot of things I do, other people can't get away with, you know what I'm saying?"

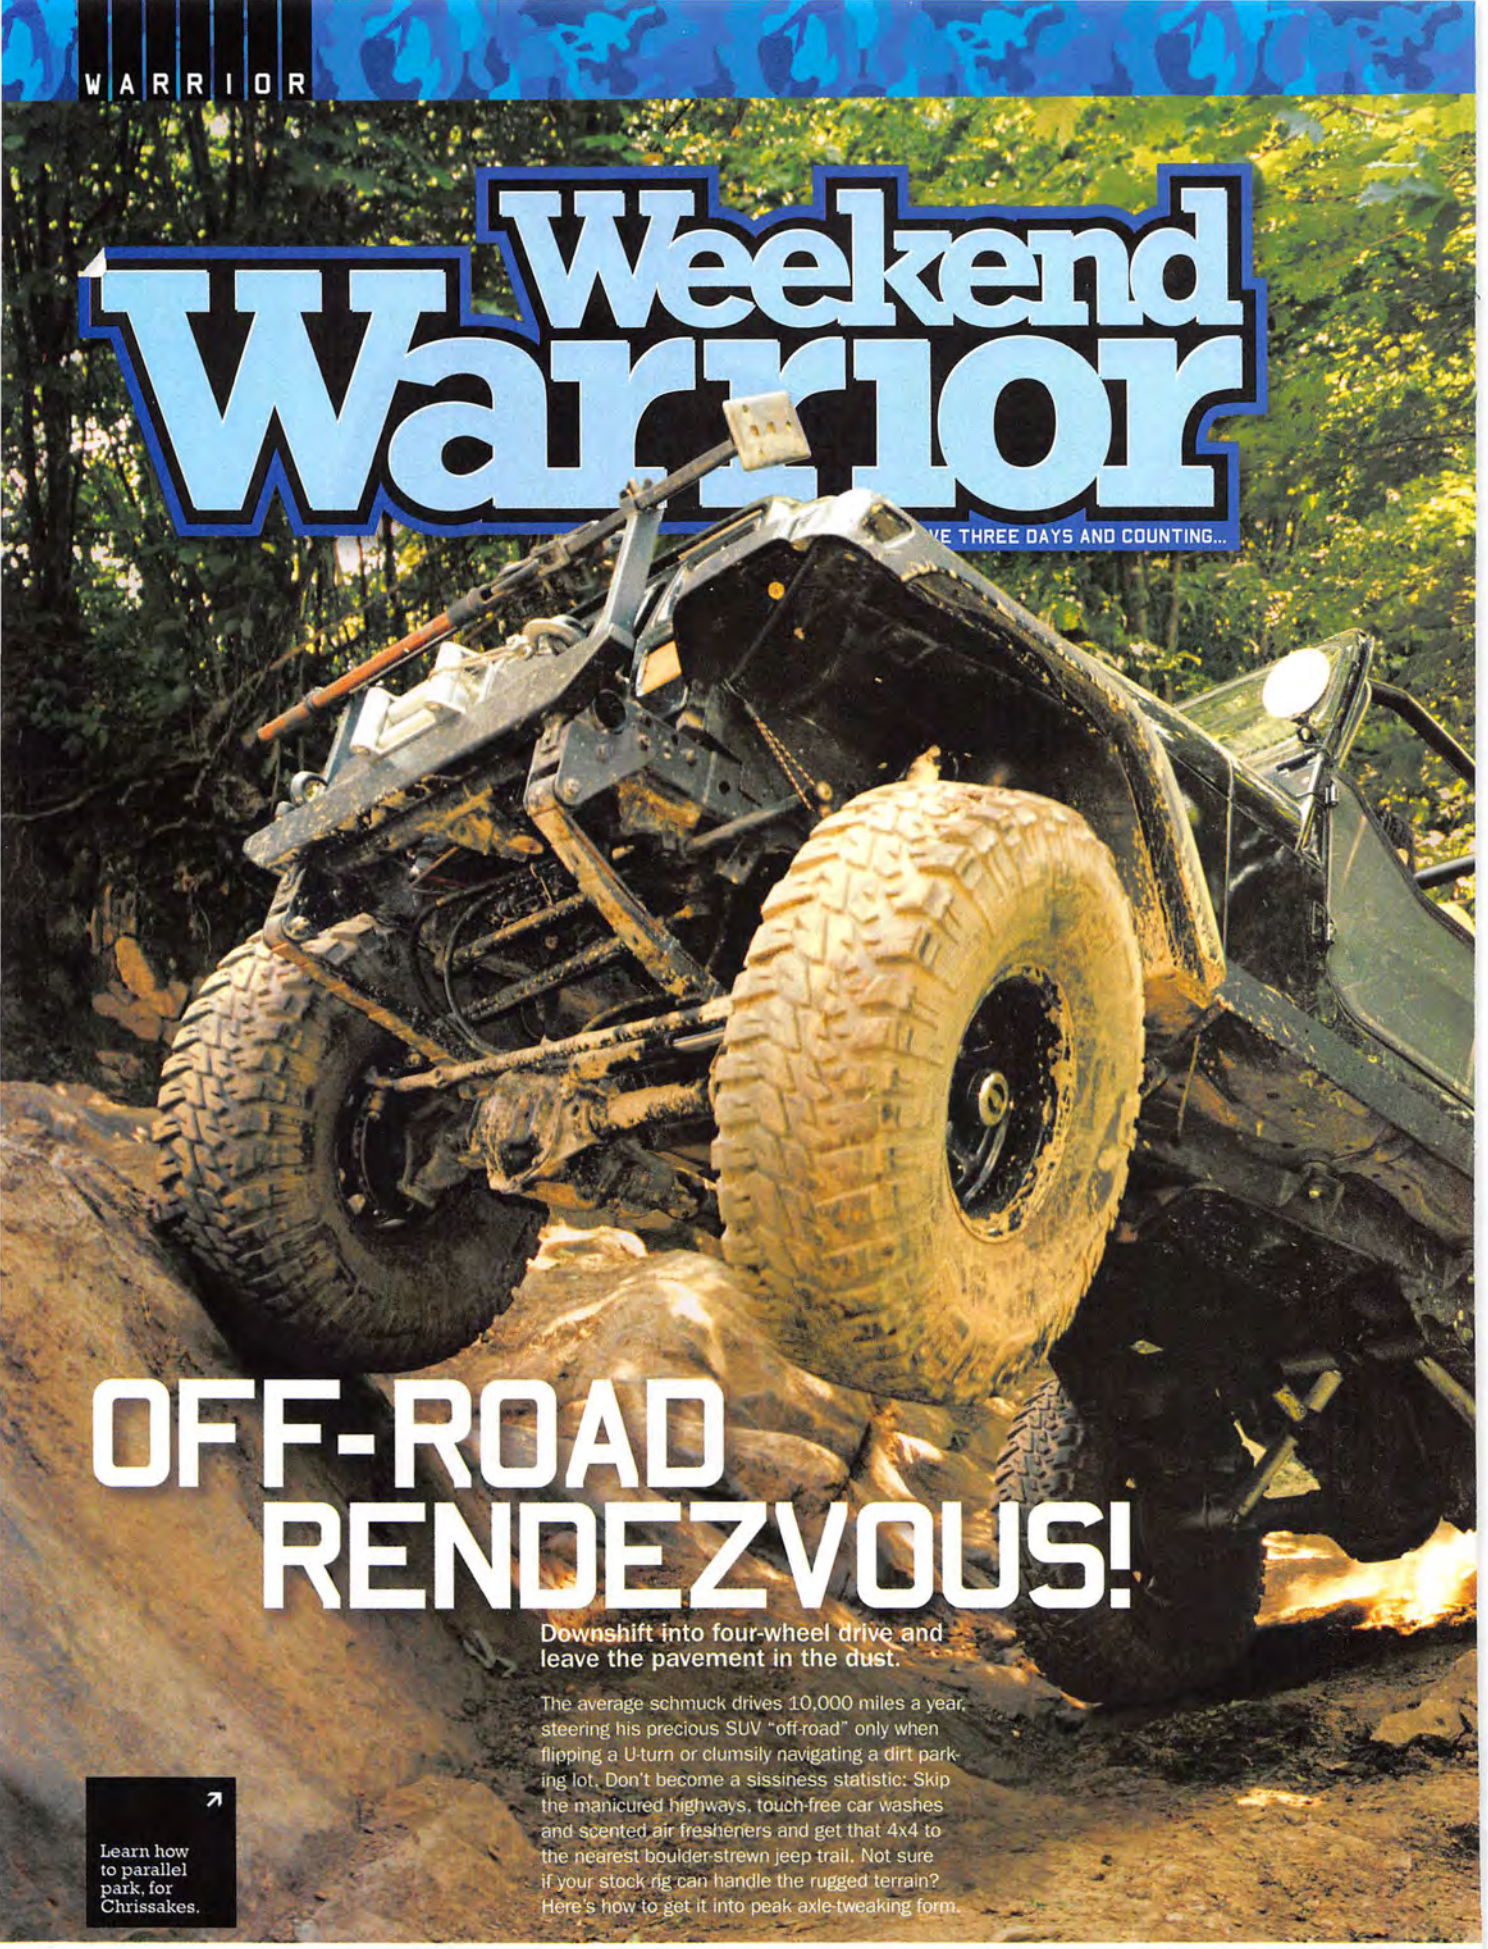
...VE THREE DAYS AND COUNTING...

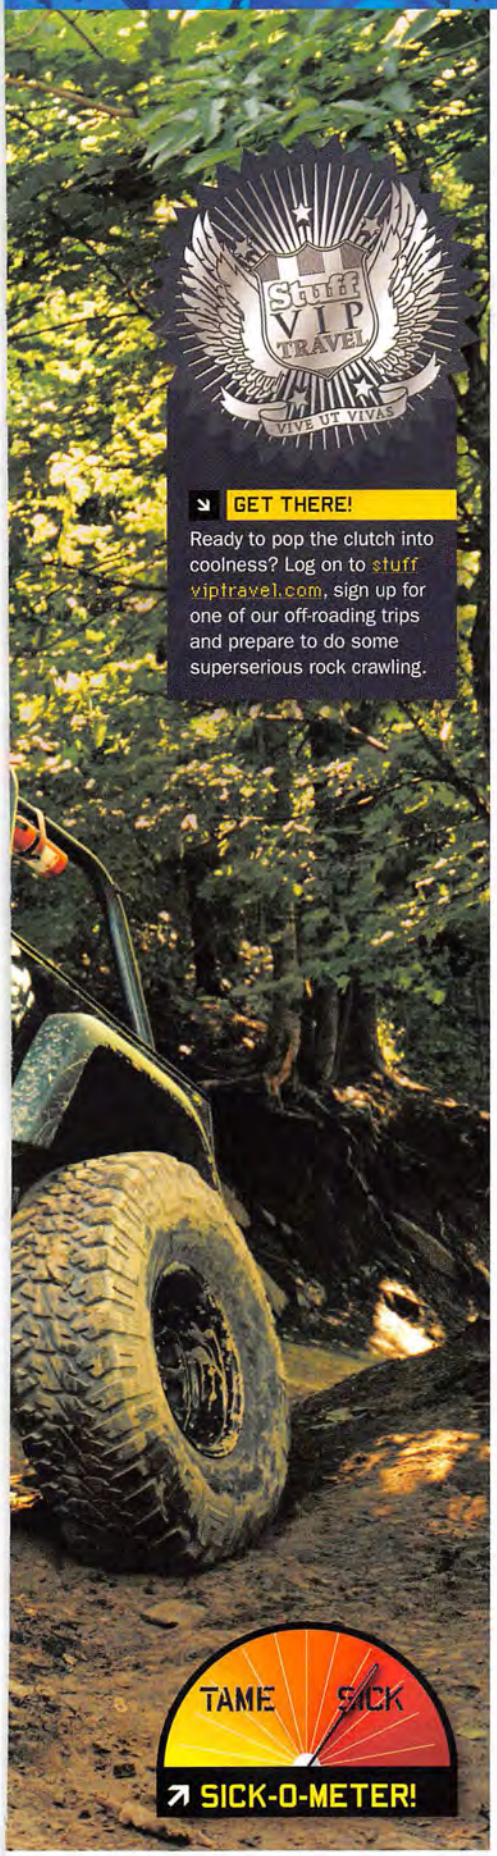


OFF-ROAD RENDEZVOUS!

Downshift into four-wheel drive and leave the pavement in the dust.

The average schmuck drives 10,000 miles a year, steering his precious SUV "off-road" only when flipping a U-turn or clumsily navigating a dirt parking lot. Don't become a sissiness statistic: Skip the manicured highways, touch-free car washes and scented air fresheners and get that 4x4 to the nearest boulder-strewn jeep trail. Not sure if your stock rig can handle the rugged terrain? Here's how to get it into peak axle-tweaking form.

↗ Learn how to parallel park, for Chrissakes.



GET THERE!

Ready to pop the clutch into coolness? Log on to stuffviptravel.com, sign up for one of our off-roading trips and prepare to do some superserious rock crawling.

SICK-O-METER!

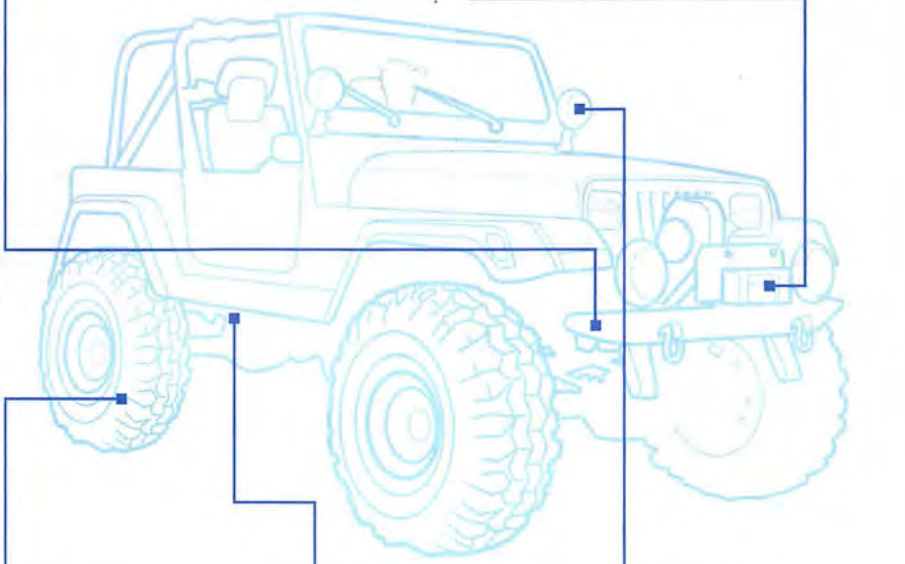
MAKE THY CHARIOT BURLY WITH THESE AUDACIOUS ADD-ONS

BUMP UP!
ARB DELUXE WINCH BUMPER / $789

A winch bumper, or "bull bar," is a heavy-duty component designed to house your winch and protect your car from engine-crumpling impacts on the trail. In other words, it's a safety device, but it also makes other drivers scared of getting rear-ended by you at stoplights. arbusa.com

WINCH OUT!
WARN 9.5TI THERMOMETRIC SELF-RECOVERY WINCH / $1,140

If your rig gets stuck in a ditch and you don't have an army of 'roid-raging linebackers to push you out, simply rope your winch cable around the sturdiest thing you can find and reel yourself out. Then get stuck all over again! warn.com



ROLL UP!
INTERCO SUPER SWAMPER TSL/BOGGER 33x12.5-15LT / $200 EACH

Why do you need huge tires? Aside from the fact that they instantly quadruple your vehicle's coolness factor, their deep treads and massive footprints provide essential traction. Deflate slightly for even better grip. intercotire.com

GET LIFTED!
RANCHO RS9000X SHOCK ABSORBER / $99 EACH

Having an assload of ground clearance is key when you're off-road, and one way to boost your rock-crawling performance is to get a suspension lift. These beefy shocks will hoist your undercarriage out of harm's way and make you feel short. gorancho.com

SHINE ON!
PIAA 580 SERIES DRIVING LAMP / $300

Your stock lights aren't as bright as you think, and, come dusk, even those high beams can let you down on a narrow off-road trail. To illuminate those hidden rocks, steep angles and deceptive ruts, you need retina-searing lamps. The difference is night and day—literally. piaa.com

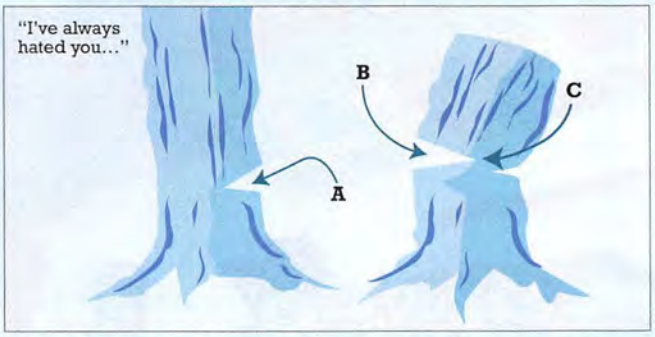
WISCONSIN CHAINSAW MASSACRE!

Talking chop at the Lumberjack World Championships.

If a tree gets mercilessly buzzed to the ground by a chainsaw-wielding Paul Bunyan wannabe and 12,000 screaming fans are around to hear it, does it make a sound? You bet your sawdust-sprinkled ass it does—just ask anyone who's ever checked out the Lumberjack World Championships. With more furious slashing than a made-for-TV horror flick, it's no wonder this Hayward, Wisconsin, event is the Kentucky Derby of logging. Talk about blisters—these burly Jacks and Jills go boot to boot in more than 21 events, including the ax throw, underhand chop, standing block chop and 90-foot open cedar climb. There's also the springboard chop, an acrobatic crowd-pleaser in which agile woodsmen hack deep notches into vertical pines, ram springboard-like planks into the slots and balance on them like Olympic divers (see above right) while decapitating the tops of their posts. Now that's bearded athleticism! Lumberjacks aren't required to wear flannel or chew fistfuls of tobacco, but for a shot at the $50,000 prize purse, these weathered arborists will do whatever it takes to gain an edge in the competition. Treehuggers, beware. lumberjackworldchampionships.com

HOW TO END A TREE'S LIFE PROPERLY



"LET'S BUZZ THIS BASTARD."

Examine your hapless victim and the surrounding conditions. Which way is the tree leaning? Is there a strong wind? Are there power lines or protesting hippies nearby? Plan an escape route 45 degrees to the rear of the expected fall direction, and make sure no humans are within double the height of the tree.

"ARE MY ARMS SUPPOSED TO GET THIS TIRED?"

Start with a 45-degree notch on the side that the tree will fall toward (A). Chop the bottom, and cut until you're about one-third of the way through. Make your second cut at a 45-degree angle from the first, chopping until the two cuts meet. Spit on your hands, you know, real masculine-like.

"TIMBER, BITCHES!"

You are now ready for the felling cut. Start at the opposite side, two inches higher than the floor of the first notch, and chop until the tree begins to topple (B), leaving a hinge (C) in the center to keep your conquest from kicking back as her weight shifts. When she tips, sprint to safety like a frightened kitten.

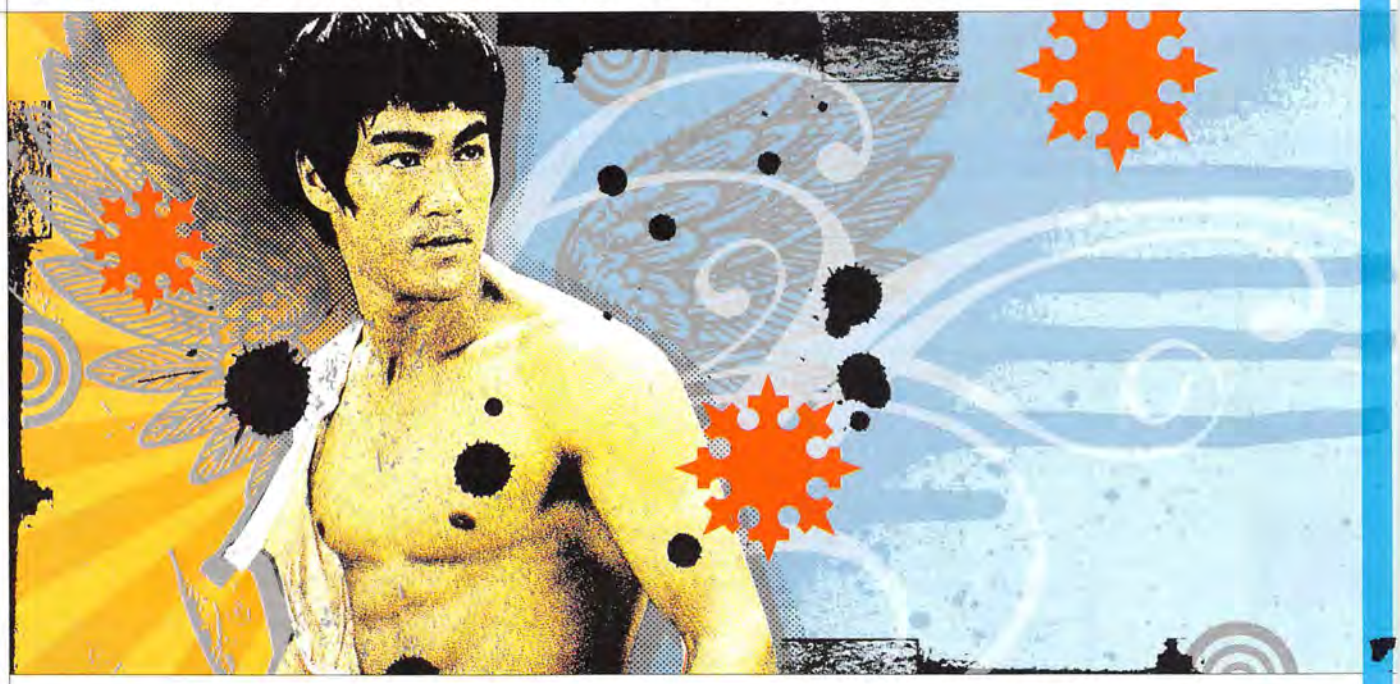
INTERVIEWS WITH DEAD CELEBRITIES



BRUCE LEE

World-renowned medium Victoria Bullis summons the icon's spirit to find out how he kicks it in the afterlife.

STUFF: How are you doing, Bruce?
VICTORIA: He's doing fine. I see him up there right now with Brandon. Besides being father and son, they are very much spiritually linked.

People say the "Curse of the Dragon" is the reason you guys both died so young. Is there really a curse?
Yeah, there is. The curse is from another lifetime, when they were both Chinese warlords. They came down from Mongolia and wiped out a lot of Eastern Europe around the 10th century A.D. They were murderers. Brandon was part of this, but Bruce was at the head of it. It's no accident that these two went out at an early age.

Who cursed you?
Shamans put a curse on them and their heirs forevermore. These kinds of things happen; that's why some people cannot be successful no matter what. Hold on...Brandon is asking me not to say a lot about this because his mother will probably read it and be hurt. She's still wounded about their deaths—Brandon's especially.

OK, we'll switch gears. Bruce, do you feel happy when you see what a huge icon you've become?
Oh yeah, he does. He loves the fact that his memory is living on in a good way and that people are remembering him, wishing he were still here and idealizing him. At some point when he's back again in another life, he will see posters of himself and know it was him.

Do you watch over the tough-guy actors that you influenced, like Chuck Norris?
Chuck Norris can see him. You don't attempt to be a master at these disciplines without tapping into the other side. So Chuck Norris, Bruce says, is in quite frequent dialogue—that was his way of saying it—with him. He also says Chuck Norris will somehow find this interview.

How about Steven Seagal?
Absolutely. In fact, Steven Seagal has received training from Bruce from the other side. He's shown him new moves!

And Jackie Chan?
Jackie Chan's been in contact with him also. This is interesting: Bruce says if he were still here, he and Jackie would be absolute rivals, and they would hate each other. While they would both keep the peace and do their best to leave each other alone, deep inside they would be seething when the other one got a movie role.

Would you do comedies like Jackie does?
Yes, he loves comedy. He likes Will Ferrell.

Would you have done a buddy movie with Will?
Yeah, absolutely! He really likes Will. I wonder if Will Ferrell has ever talked to him. I don't know. I think Will Ferrell has felt his presence around. He's very intuitive. Look at his eyes—he has real depth even though he's a comedian.

Besides acting, is there anything else you would be doing if you were still here?
Yes, absolutely. He would be producing movies, directing movies, and he'd even be writing scripts. He would be doing the whole nine yards.

Anything non-Hollywood-related?
I'm seeing a chain of restaurants with a kung fu–type theme. They would have a little bit of a Hollywood theme to them, like the Hard Rock Cafe, but they'd be Chinese. Kind of like P.F. Chang's with a kung-fu twist. Somebody will probably take that idea and run with it.

Who do you spend time with on the other side?
For some reason I just saw Steve McQueen—and someone else. He has a gravelly voice and gray hair. He was in some movies in the '60s and '70s about World War II...it's Lee Marvin!

Wow, you guys must be the toughest threesome in heaven, huh?
Yeah, they're all up there together.

Do you keep up with your physical training in heaven?
He says, "I don't need to be physically fit on the other side because I don't have a physique." He was trying to make a joke. In other words, he doesn't have a body—he is a spirit—so he doesn't have to worry about being physically fit. He does love hanging around people who are doing martial arts, though. He's there to help people—little kids, older people, masters and so on.
